Germans dominated city's early history and set out to assemble a work crew. For religious and economic reasons, Scott believes, Rudisill recruited Germans.

GERMANS From 1B

"Germans were frugal and could live cheaply," the local historian explains. "And besides, Germans would work like hell."

To get them here, Rudisill wrote letters to Lutheran Church officials and friends in Baltimore. Soon word spread that there was work available in Fort Wayne, and Germans began arriving in caravans.

Life for the German settlers mirrored life in the old country. Many of them were farmers and worked at clearing the land during the spring and summer months, then turned to trades during the off-seasons. There were boot- and shoemakers among them, and clock-makers and carpenters.

As the city grew during the rest of the 19th century, the Germans dominated the local population as well as local government, from the mayor's office to the police department, from the city council to the fire department.

The Germans of this era fit into three categories: Lutherans, Catholics and those who were neither.

"There were actually as many German Catholics in the city as there were Lutherans," Scott says. "But the Lutherans have always gotten more press."

Most of the early German-Americans who settled in Fort Wayne were not particularly religious people, though, notes Scott. But the church filled a social need for the settlers and soon became the center of many of their lives.

The German dominance in the city began to erode in the early 1900s. This dominance further eroded when World War I broke out. Scott notes in those war years it was possible to become a legal citizen of Indiana and not necessarily the country. When the war broke out, Germans who were not considered U.S. citizens were considered aliens until they visited the federal courthouse and filed their citizenship papers.

The generation of folks with German roots emerging during this period often shunned its roots, pledging its allegiance to the flag of the United States of America. Following the war, the Germans faded into the mainstream, leaving only their names as evidence of their heritage.

Renewed interest in genealogy has brought with it an appreciation of the customs of the countries of our origins, Germany included. And some of these customs will be recreated during the Germanfest.

Jim Sack, special programs coordinator for the city, said the celebration will include an authentic German beer tent with folk dancers, polka and waltz contests.

Some of the other events include a Bach recital at St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church; archery competition; concerts by the city's German song groups, the Mannerchor and the Camerate Baroque Ensemble; and soccer matches.

PEOPLE NEW TO PARENTHOOD include actress/singer Marie Osmond Craig. She is shown here introducing the newest member of the Osmond clan, her son Stephen James, born April 20 to Marie and her husband Stephen Craig. The baby was named for his father and Marie's youngest brother, Jimmy. The new baby is the 29th grandchild of the George and Olive Osmond family, and the 10th grandchild for the paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Craig of Los Angeles.

SCREEN BODIES: The steamiest singles action these days is in health clubs. Author Aaron Latham tells all about it in "Looking for Mr. Goodbody," which is about to join "Saturday Night Fever" and "Urban Cowboy" in the ranks of films based on magazine articles. Latham has just sold "Goodbody," his cover story in Rolling Stone magazine, to Columbia Pix. Hollywood sources tell us Aaron got $250,000 for the rights to the story, which focuses on the burgeoning singles scene in the sweat palaces, plus $150,000 to write the screenplay. Aaron himself told Eavesdropping, "I don't want to talk about money." Aaron, author, too, of the Esquire piece that inspired "Urban Cowboy," says casting is not yet set but, as with "Cowboy," "we'll probably use actors in the main roles and real people as extras." Shooting should start in the fall.

PRICEY GLAD-HANDER: Rocky Graziano is pulling in a lot of dough in Atlantic City, but none of it at the gaming tables. The ex-middleweight champ is now a casino manager and consultant for the Playboy Hotel and, says Rocky, "It's a great job — I just work Friday and Saturday nights." Doing what? "I walk around shaking hands. Everybody knows me and says hello. I've got a stack of photos that I give to people when they ask for my autograph." For his efforts, Rocky is paid "about what Mickey Mantle gets." (Mantle reportedly makes $100,000 a year as goodwill ambassador at the Bally Park Hotel and Casino in Atlantic City.)

government's opening of land for sale in Indiana, the efforts of Henry Rudisill and advances in transportation, especially the canals.

"The opening up of land in Indiana (in the mid-1820s) happened to come at the same time that there was a mass exodus of Germans leaving their country for economic reasons," explains Scott, who researched the city's German heritage for an article published in the Northwest Ohio Quarterly two years ago. Most of the Germans who eventually arrived in Fort Wayne were poor and had left their homeland hoping to find life better in America.

Late in 1829, two men from Toledo, John McCorkle and John Barr, purchased most of what is now downtown Fort Wayne. The area at that time was nothing but trees and swampland, and the two men realized they would need a hardworking crew, led by an equally hardworking foreman to clear it.

They turned to Henry Rudisill, a resident of Baltimore with a reputation of having the qualities sought. His responsibilities were to cut trees and clear the land, a job that would take a whole generation to complete.

Rudisill settled in Fort Wayne

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a general discussion of the problem. It is shown that the problem is of great importance and that it has not been completely solved. The author then proceeds to a detailed analysis of the problem, showing that it is a special case of a more general problem. The author then discusses the various methods that have been used to solve the problem, and shows that the method proposed in this paper is the most efficient. The author then gives a detailed description of the method, showing how it is applied to the problem. The author then discusses the results of the calculations, and shows that they are in good agreement with the experimental results. The author then concludes the paper by stating that the method proposed in this paper is a new and efficient method for solving the problem.

NICKEL
PLATE

Cityscapes: Traffic on right tracks

If you think downtown traffic is hopelessly snarled now, you should have seen it in the good old days.

There were no synchronized traffic lights to keep cars moving; no one-way streets to speed things along. Booming department stores were everywhere, not having yet been squeezed out by shopping malls. And there were plenty of shoppers who came to Wolf & Dessauer's or the Grand Leader by car or by trolley.

There were also the trains of the Nickel Plate Railroad — 32 of them every day. They passed through town on a regular basis, bottling up downtown traffic for miles as they chugged north of town.

Today, the old Nickel Plate tracks are part of the Norfolk and Western system. But they no longer cause much of a traffic problem. Here's how it happened:

For decades, Fort Wayne's north side was ignored by developers, in part because getting there depended on avoiding the Nickel Plate trains. By 1923, the board of works suggested the tracks be elevated, as they had been about 10 years earlier on the south side of downtown. But nothing happened for 24 years.

Finally, in 1947, Mayor Harry Baals signed an agreement with the Nickel Plate people to elevate the tracks at seven crossings. Bonds were issued in 1953 and work began Dec. 15 of that year. The city and county each paid 40 percent of the $9 million cost and the railroad picked up the remaining 20 percent.

As work progressed, traffic was mangled even further. It would have been much worse than that, but temporary tracks were laid to keep most of the rail traffic moving. Finally, on Oct. 4, 1955, the two-mile elevation was dedicated. The elevation effectively closed sections of downtown streets, but the result was considered worth it.

As traffic today passes under the tracks, motorists hurrying to get home in time for a hot dinner should be thankful they were not born just a few decades earlier.

There was one unfortunate aspect of the elevation, however. The two-mile-long project obliterated most of the remaining traces downtown of the old Wabash and Erie Canal. The Nickel Plate had been built in 1882 on the old canal route.

The elevation also forced the closing of the fine old Nickel Plate depot, between Calhoun and Clinton near Superior Street. It was torn down soon after. ■

Dear Al -

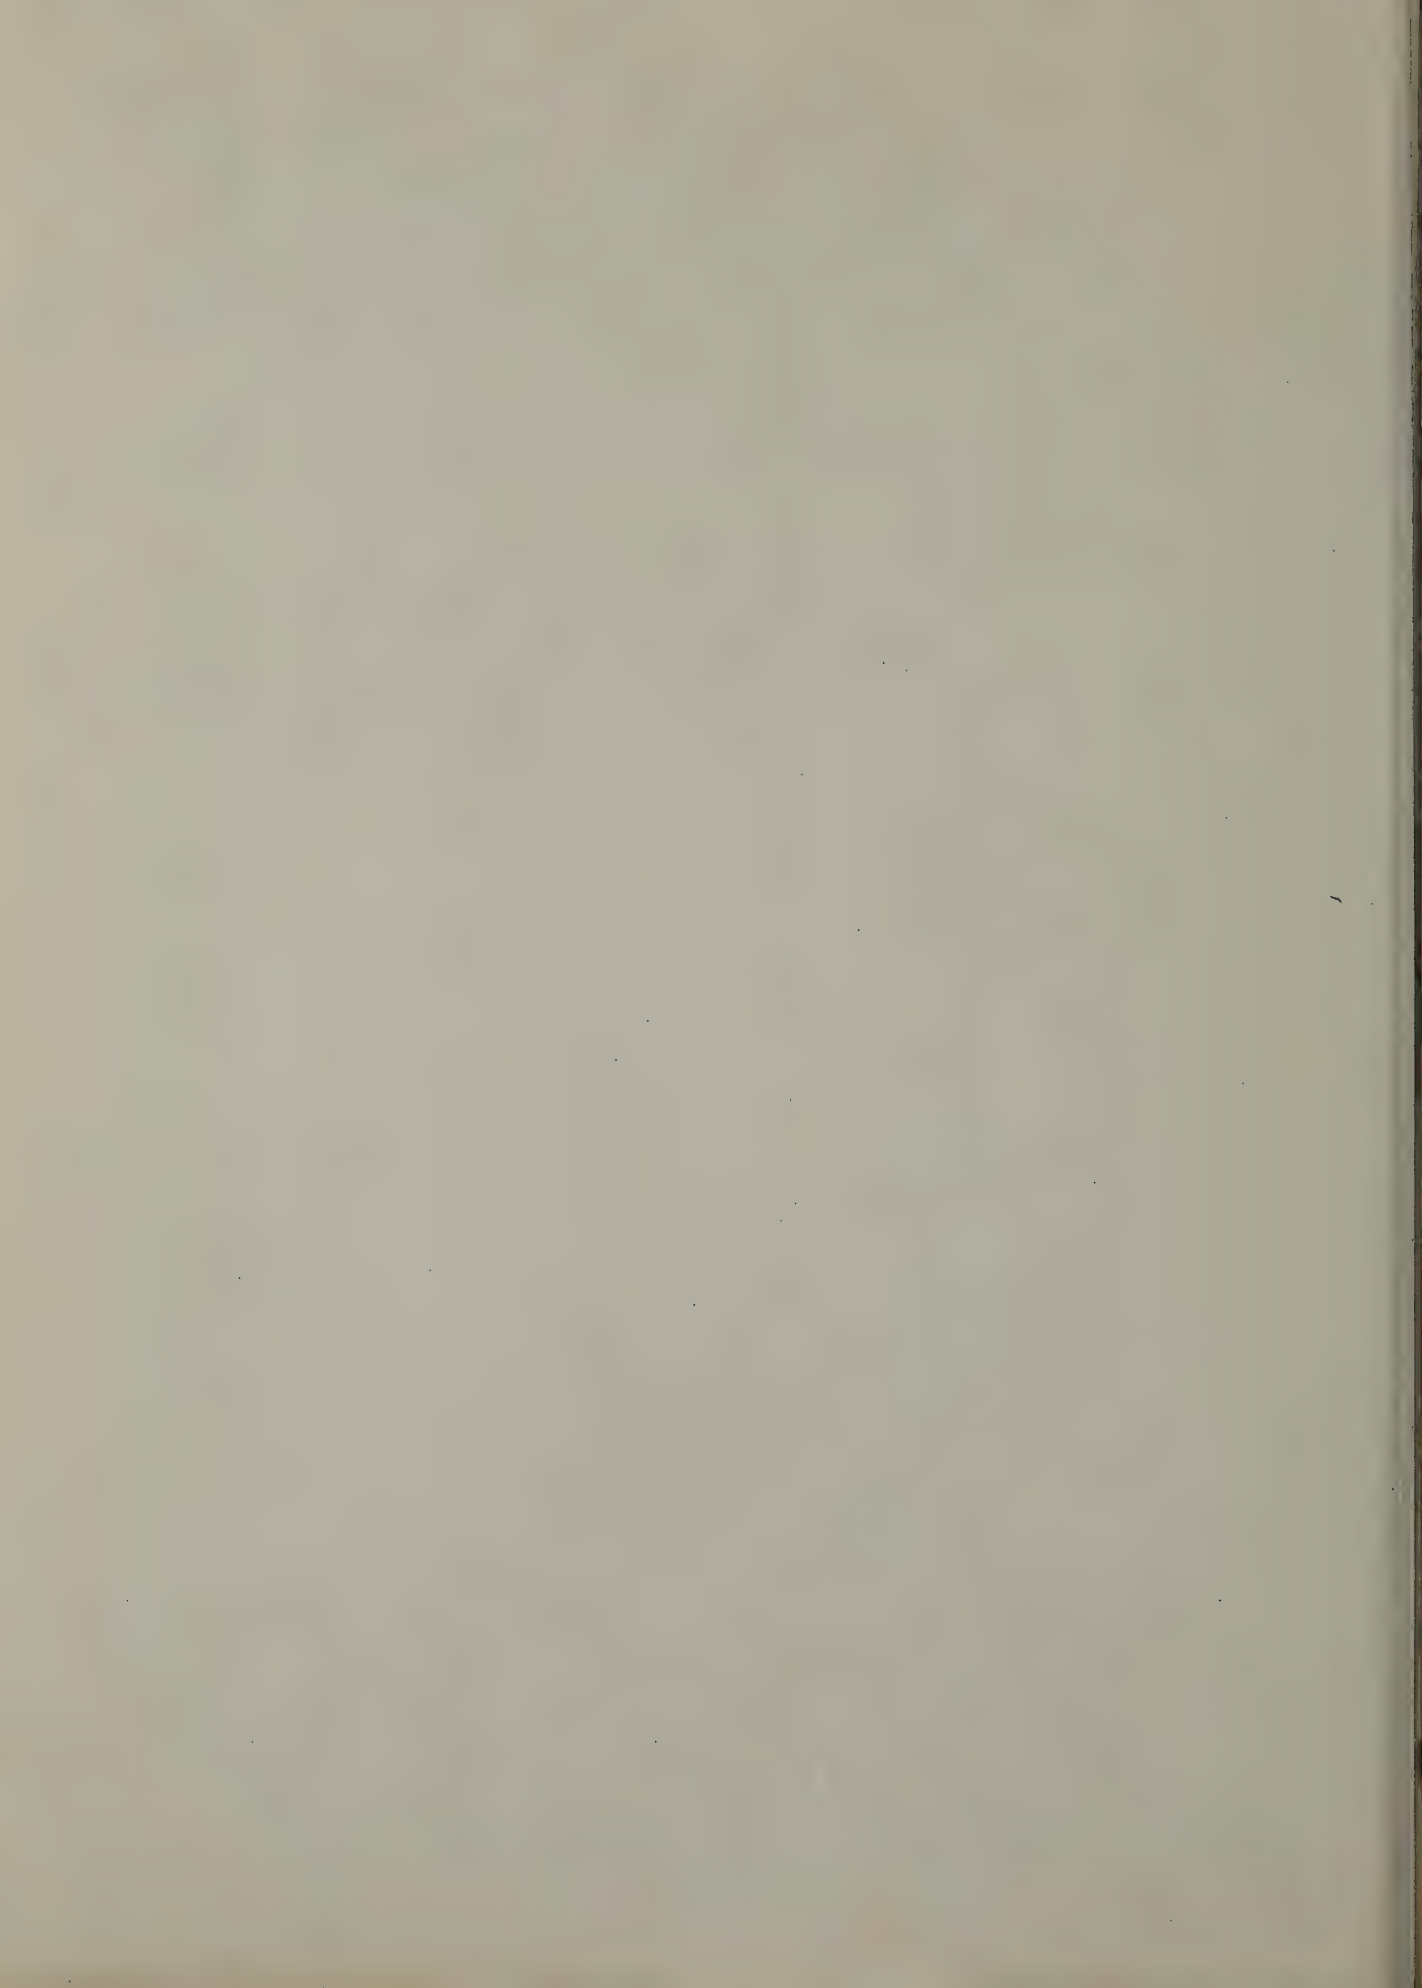

Sorry we took so long with this. No excuse, really, we just never got around to it.

Hope we didn't mess the pages up too much, but we thought we should correct any mistakes we knew of.

My dad's name was Philip, with only one i. I always thought it had two, but he very seldom signed "Philip", because even in business he was known as "Phil A. Wick" - Printers.

We only used one i in our son's name, because we thought it silly to use two. Dad didn't tell me till about 10 yrs. ago that his name only had one i.

Tell your wife and mom "hello". Come visit us sometime.
With Love - Vaughn and Rita Nicole

Dear Cousins -

I hope you'll forgive me for being so late with your Mom's remembrance. Please use the money for whatever you wish.

Bergie was a wonderful lady. Since she entered St. Anne's Home several years ago, Vaughn and I both talked of going to visit with her sometime. But, oh, the time goes so fast!

After 35 1/2 years of marriage, my dear Vaughn died January 31, 1978. Right after that horrible blizzard. He had heart trouble for 23 years, and all that snow didn't help any.

Vaughn had been in the hospital several times because of his heart. Then in 1967 he had one of the arteries in his neck cleaned out. At that time Bergie sent him a beautiful large Christmas candle as a gift. He was released from the hospital on Christmas Day. Every year at Christmas we used "Bergie's Candle". Finally, Vaughn had to put a new candle in the beautiful setting. He had it all ready for Christmas 1977. But for some reason we forgot to display the candle that year. I had gotten it out of the attic, but we never lit it. So Vaughn never saw the new "Bergie's candle" lit. I even put it in a big bag each year which says "Bergie's candle." So now Vaughn and Bergie are both gone, but I still have "their" candle. Now the kids and I light it, and enjoy it still.

On Nov. 23rd, 1979, my Mom died. She was at Byron Center for a little over a year. Mom and Bergie had many a laugh together since Dad died in 1964. Mom and I used to go to Aunt Mayme Waship's or Aunt Marie Wilcox's years ago and quite often Bergie was there.

I sure appreciate my three children. Two of them live in Chicago. Dick is a physicist at Argonne and Mary works at Johns - Hopkins. Philip and his wife and two sons are in town. Without my brothers or sisters, I'd really be lost without my kids. With Love and Sympathy

WED 2-1-1978

Services for Vaughn F. Nicole, 54, who died at 9:45 a.m. Tuesday in his home at 13525 Lima Road, will be 10 a.m. Thursday in St. Vincent's Catholic Church.

A native of Hicksville, O., Mr. Nicole had lived in Fort Wayne the past 50 years. He had been employed by Otis Elevator Co. and was a member of the International Union of Elevator Contractors. He also belonged to the St. Vincent's Men's Club.

He is survived by his wife, Rita; two sons, Philip of Fort Wayne and Paul of Chicago, Ill.; a daughter, Mrs. Mary Ann Rogan of Chicago; a brother, Lester of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; and a sister, Mrs. Ellen Johnston of Fort Lauderdale.

Burial will be in St. Vincent's church cemetery. There are no calling hours. Preferred memorials are gifts for masses or to St. Vincent's Catholic Church Building Fund. Mungovan & Sons Lakeside Chapel is handling arrangements.

NIEZER FAMILY HISTORY BY DICK ISENHOUR

IN THE NORTHWEST CORNER OF WEST GERMANY, FACING THE NORTH SEA, LIES HANOVER, ONE OF THE OLDEST PROVINCES IN ONE OF THE WORLD'S OLDEST NATIONS.

THE REGION HAS LONG BEEN AN EDUCATIONAL AND MANUFACTURING CENTER, AND IT IS THE MOTHERLAND OF TWO OF FORT WAYNE'S OLDEST FAMILIES, THE NIEZERS AND THE NIEMEYERS.

LIKE MANY OTHER GERMANS, THE NIEZERS AND NIEMEYERS IMMIGRATED TO AMERICA IN THE MID-1800'S, SEEKING STABILITY AND PROSPERITY IN A NEW COUNTRY.

CHRISTINE LOUISE BUSEN AND BERNARD NIEZER, FORM THE FOUNDATION UPON WHICH THE NIEZER FAMILY HAS GROWN THROUGHOUT ITS HISTORY IN FORT WAYNE, ACCORDING TO BERNARD M. NIEZER, PRESENT-DAY PATRIARCH OF THE CLAN.

CHRISTINE BUSEN WAS BORN IN 1815, FOUR MILES NORTHWEST OF MINDEN, NEAR BREMEN IN HANOVER. SHE CAME TO AMERICA IN MAY 1838 ABOARD THE TWO MASTED SCHOONER "KATRINE" EVENTUALLY SETTLING IN ALLEN COUNTY.

BERNARD NIEZER WAS BORN IN 1808 IN OSSENBRIGGE, MUNSTER, GERMANY. THERE IS NO OFFICIAL RECORD OF WHEN HE JOURNEYED TO AMERICA, SAYS THE FIFTH-GENERATION BERNARD, BUT ESTIMATES PUT HIM HERE IN THE LATE 1830'S.

ABOUT THE TIME THE AMERICAN NIEZER FAMILY WAS TAKING ROOT, THE CATHOLIC CHURCH IN FORT WAYNE WAS ALSO BEGINNING TO GROW. AND IT WAS IN THE CITY'S FIRST CATHOLIC CHURCH, ST. AUGUSTINE'S, LOCATED WHERE THE CATHEDRAL OF THE IMMACULATE CONCEPTION NOW STANDS.

1. The first part of the paper discusses the importance of the study and the objectives of the research. It also provides a brief overview of the literature review and the methodology used in the study.

2. The second part of the paper presents the results of the study. It includes a detailed analysis of the data collected and the findings of the research. The results are presented in a clear and concise manner, using tables and figures where appropriate.

3. The third part of the paper discusses the implications of the study. It explores the potential applications of the findings and the limitations of the study. It also provides suggestions for further research and the conclusions drawn from the study.

4. The final part of the paper is a conclusion that summarizes the main findings of the study and the overall contribution of the research. It also includes a list of references and a list of figures and tables.

THAT BERNARD AND CHRISTINE WERE MARRIED IN 1839.

FOLLOWING THEIR MARRIAGE, THEY PURCHASED FROM THE GOVERNMENT 80 ACRES OF LAND IN MILAN TOWNSHIP, NEAR GAR CREEK, ALONG THE WABASH AND ERIE CANAL. GERMANS IN THOSE DAYS EITHER OPTED TO STAY CLOSE TO THE CITY AND PRACTICE A TRADE OR BUY LAND IN OUTLYING PARTS OF THE COUNTY AND FARM. THE NIEZERS CHOSE TO BE FARMERS.

THEY HAD SEVEN CHILDREN, THE FOURTH, JOHN B., REPRESENTING THE SECOND GENERATION OF THE CURRENT NIEZER FAMILY.

BORN JULY 21, 1846, JOHN B. NIEZER WAS EDUCATED IN FORT WAYNE AND AT AGE 14 BECAME A TINNER'S APPRENTICE. HE WORKED AT THAT TRADE UNTIL 1865, WHEN HE MOVED TO MONROEVILLE AND ESTABLISHED A HARDWARE STORE.

ON APRIL 28, 1868, JOHN MARRIED SARAH EYANSON, IN THE CATHEDRAL. THE REV. JULIAN BENOIT, ONE OF THE MISSIONARY PRIESTS WHO FREQUENTLY VISITED THE CITY DURING THIS ERA, PERFORMED THE CEREMONY.

JOHN B. NIEZER WAS A COMPETENT BUSINESSMAN AND IN 1886 HE ESTABLISHED A HAY, GRAIN AND COAL BUSINESS AND OPERATED TWO GRAIN ELEVATORS, ONE IN MONROEVILLE AND THE OTHER IN CONWOY, OHIO.

IN ENSUING YEARS HE WOULD SERVE A TERM AS COUNTY AUDITOR, ORGANIZE CITIZENS STATE BANK OF MONROEVILLE, THE FIRST BANKING INSTITUTION IN ALLEN COUNTY OUTSIDE FORT WAYNE, AND BECOME ONE OF THE FOUNDERS OF THE GERMAN-AMERICAN NATIONAL BANK, PREDECESSOR TO LINCOLN NATIONAL BANK.

NIEZER - 3 -

JOHN AND SARAH HAD SIX CHILDREN, INCLUDING GEORGE B. NIEZER, FATHER OF BERNARD M.

G. B. NIEZER WAS BORN IN MONROEVILLE SEPT. 19, 1881. HE ATTENDED PUBLIC SCHOOLS IN MONROEVILLE AND AFTER GRADUATION FROM PURDUE UNIVERSITY, FOLLOWED HIS FATHER'S INTEREST IN BUSINESS.

EMPLOYED INITIALLY AT THE WESTERN GAS CONSTRUCTION CO., GEORGE JOINED THE NIEZER FUEL CO., FOUNDED BY HIS FATHER. HE SERVED AS PRESIDENT OF THE COMPANY FOR 15 YEARS AND THEN WAS AFFILIATED WITH THE UTENSILS MANUFACTURING CO. AS VICE-PRESIDENT AND GENERAL MANAGER.

GEORGE MARRIED FRANCES ELIZABETH BOOS SEPT 14, 1909, AND SIX YEARS LATER, BERNARD M. WAS BORN.

THE BUSINESS LEARNING TYPIFYING THIS FAMILY ARE CARRIED ON TODAY. BERNARD M. IS CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF O'ROURKE ANDREW & MARONEY, AN INSURANCE FIRM WHERE HE HAS WORKED FOR MORE THAN 45 YEARS.

HE AND HIS WIFE GERALDINE, HAVE SIX SONS, INCLUDING THREE WHO ARE FORT WAYNE RESIDENTS, STEPHEN B., IN CHARGE OF DEVELOPING FOR MCJON'S INC, WILLIAM G., AN AGENT FOR O'ROURKE ANDREW & MARONEY, AND GERALD, PRODUCTION MANAGER FOR GOLD SHIELD FIBERGLAS IN DECATUR. THE OTHERS INCLUDE, BERNARD WHO IS COMPLETING WORK TOWARD A MASTER'S DEGREE IN HOSPITAL ADMINISTRATION AT THE INDIANA UNIVERSITY MEDICAL SCHOOL IN INDIANAPOLIS; THOMAS M., WHO WILL ENTER LAW SCHOOL AT THE UNIVERSITY OF DAYTON THIS FALL; AND EDWARD (TED), A SENIOR AT NOTRE DAME UNIVERSITY. THERE ARE FIVE NIEZER GRANDCHILDREN.

The first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the car was the cold. It was a crisp, clear day, and the sun was shining brightly. I took a deep breath and felt the cool air fill my lungs. I looked around and saw a few people walking on the sidewalk. They were all dressed in coats and hats, and I realized that it was winter. I walked towards the building and saw a sign that said "The Great Hall". I entered the building and saw a large, ornate hall with high ceilings and chandeliers. I walked towards the front of the hall and saw a man in a suit standing there. He looked at me and said, "Welcome to the Great Hall. I am Mr. Smith. How can I help you?" I told him that I was looking for a room and he showed me to a room on the second floor. I went to the room and saw a large bed, a desk, and a chair. I sat on the bed and thought about what I was going to do next. I decided to go to the library and look for some books. I went to the library and saw a man in a suit standing there. He looked at me and said, "Welcome to the library. I am Mr. Jones. How can I help you?" I told him that I was looking for some books and he showed me to a room on the third floor. I went to the room and saw a large desk, a chair, and a bookshelf. I sat at the desk and started reading a book. I was reading a book about the history of the Great Hall and I was interested in what I was reading. I read the book and found out that the Great Hall was built in the 18th century and it was one of the most important buildings in the city. I was happy that I had found a good book to read.

After I finished reading the book, I went to the library and saw a man in a suit standing there. He looked at me and said, "Welcome to the library. I am Mr. Jones. How can I help you?" I told him that I was looking for some books and he showed me to a room on the third floor. I went to the room and saw a large desk, a chair, and a bookshelf. In ensuing years he would serve as county auditor, organize Citizens State Bank in Monroeville, the first banking institution in Len County outside Fort Wayne, and was one of the founders of the German-American National Bank, predecessor to Lincoln Bank.

John and Sarah had six children: George B. Niezer, father of Bernard M. Niezer.

George B. Niezer was born in Monroeville, Ohio, in 1881. He attended public schools in Monroeville and after graduation from Purdue University followed his father's interest in business.

Employed initially at the Western Construction Co., George joined the Niezer Co. founded by his father. He served as president of the company for 15 years and then with the Utensils Manufacturing Co. as president and general manager.

George married Francis Elizabeth Niezer, daughter of Bernard Niezer, in 1909, and six years later, Bernard Niezer died.

The business leanings typifying this family carried on today. Bernard M. Niezer is chairman of O'Rourke Andrew & Marone, an insurance firm where he has worked for many years.

He and his wife, Geraldine, have three children: Gerald, including three who are Fort Wayne residents: Stephen B., in charge of developing for William G., an agent for O'Rourke Anderson, and Gerald, production manager.

Hanover produced 2 of oldest families

By DICK ISENHOUR
Of The News-Sentinel

In the northwest corner of West Germany, facing the North Sea, lies Hanover, one of the oldest provinces in one of the world's oldest nations.

The region has long been an educational and manufacturing center, and it is the motherland of two of Fort Wayne's oldest families, the Niezers and the Niemeyers.

Like many other Germans, the Niezers and Niemeyers immigrated to America in the mid-1800s, seeking stability and prosperity in a new country.

Christine Louise Busen and Bernard Niezer form the foundation upon which the Niezer family has grown throughout its history in Fort Wayne, according to Bernard M. Niezer, present-day patriarch of the clan.

Christine Busen was born in 1815, four miles northwest of Minden, near Bremen in Hanover. She came to America in May 1838 aboard the two-masted schooner "Katrine," eventually settling in Allen County.

Bernard Niezer was born in 1808 in Ossenbrügge, Munster, Germany. There is no official record of when he journeyed to America, says the fifth-generation Bernard, but estimates put him here in the late 1830s.

About the time the American Niezer family was taking root, the Catholic Church in Fort Wayne was also beginning to grow. And it was in the city's first Catholic Church, St. Augustine's, located where the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception now stands, that Bernard and Christine were married in 1839.

Following their marriage, they purchased from the government 80 acres of land in Milan Township, near Gar Creek, along the Wabash and Erie Canal. Germans in those days either opted to stay close to the city and practice a trade or buy land in outlying parts of the county and farm. The Niezers chose to be farmers.

They had seven children, the fourth, John B., representing the second generation of the current Niezer family.

Family trees

Here is a brief look at the Niezer and Niemeyer family trees.

The Niezers

- The first generation of the Niezer family in Allen County was Bernard Niezer and Christine Busen, married in June 1839.
- They had seven children, including John Bernard Niezer, who married Sarah Eyanson in April 1868.
- John and Sarah had six children, including George B. Niezer, who married Francis Boos in September 1909.
- George and Francis had two sons, including Bernard M., who married Geraldine O'Rourke in September 1947.
- Bernard and Geraldine have six sons and five grandchildren.
- John and Sarah had another son, Charles M., whose descendants also are residents of Fort Wayne. Charles, married Oct. 18, 1906, to Rose M. Fox, had three children, including Louis Fox Niezer, a prominent Fort Wayne attorney and former chairman of the board of Tokheim Corp. He died in February.

- Louis and his wife, Rosemary, had seven children, including John L. and James B., both of Fort Wayne. John has two sons and James one.

The Niemeyers

- The first generation of the Niemeyer family in Allen County was John Henry Niemeyer and Caroline Brueggeman, married in May 1859.
- They had six children, including Ernest Niemeyer, who married Louise Lang in October 1900.
- In the next 19 years, Ernest and Louise had nine children, including Arthur, who married Velma Marie Schmidt in December 1935.
- Arthur and Velma have three children and three grandchildren.

Tell us something special about your dad.

Let everyone know your dad's a winner

We'd like to help you tell the world — and your dad — just how special you think he is.

Maybe he made a play house for you, slaving to get it done by summer vacation ... Or maybe he sat up all night when you had a bad stomach ache, reading stories or just holding you close.

Maybe you just lost your job and he helped ease the pain by taking your whole family out to eat.

Now's your chance to tell us something special about your dad in our Father's Day contest. Complete this sentence: "The neatest thing my dad ever did for me ..." and enter your neatly written entry (on one sheet of paper) in one of our two categories. Children age 12 and under are in Division One. People over 12, including adults, are in Division Two. Entries must be received no later than June 10.

We'll select the best in each division and the two "neatest dads" will be treated to a Father's Day (or any Sunday they choose) brunch with their family (up to 6 people) at the restaurant of their choice. The writers of the winning entries also will be photographed with their fathers and featured in The News-Sentinel on June 18, the day before Father's Day, along with the winning letters and excerpts from other entries.

And if you include a stamped envelope addressed to your dad, we'll send him your letter after the contest is over, along with a note from us.

Here are the rules:

- Entries must include name, address, telephone number (where you can be reached during the day) and age. Please indicate Division One (age 12 and under) or Division Two (over 12).
- Also list your father's name, address and phone number. Fathers must still be living, but may reside anywhere in the country.
- Entries must be no longer than one hand- or type-written page.
- Entries must be received no later than 5 p.m. June 10. Send to:

The others include Bernard, who is completing work toward a master's degree in hospital administration at the Indiana University Medical School in Indianapolis; Thomas M., who will enter the law school at the University of Dayton this fall; and Edward (Ted), a senior at Notre Dame University ("a good German boy," says William, "who was just elected captain of the Irish Guard.")

There are five Niezer grandchildren.

While some of the early German settlers were drawn to this area by its farming, others came to work on the canal. Such were the beginnings of the Niemeyer family.

Although the exact date of his arrival is not known, the first of the Niemeyers in Fort Wayne was John Henry Niemeyer, or Heinrich as he was known in the old country.

"As far as we can figure," says Arthur Niemeyer, 76, one of four grandchildren of John Henry still living in Fort Wayne, "he settled in this area around 1836."

As evidence of his estimate, Niemeyer notes John Henry's John Henry is on the original constitution of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Barr and Madison streets. The church was founded by Henry Rudisill, one of the city's first German immigrants, in 1837, and Niemeyer figures John Henry was here about a year before that.

"John Henry used to operate one of the canal boats on the Wabash and Erie Canal," says Niemeyer. "He was born in the early 1800s in Duedinghausen, Stolzenah, Germany, but it's a lot easier to just say Hanover."

John Henry Niemeyer was married to Caroline Brueggeman, a resident of Whitley County whose parents were German-born, on May 15, 1859. They had six children; their youngest son was Arthur's father, Ernest, born Oct. 17, 1874.

In addition to being a captain on a riverboat, John Henry was a wood dealer and a farmer.

In May of 1900, Ernest married Louise Wilhemena Lang, and they settled down in a home at 701 Madison St. They had nine children in a 19-year period and Arthur, the fourth child (born in March 1907), vividly remembers what it was like growing up in a large family.

"It seemed like we were always sick. Whenever one of us would come down with something, it would be passed on to the rest. We had everything — measles, mumps, smallpox — you name it.

"And in those days they would quarantine your home. We always seemed to have a quarantine sign in front of our home. We'd take it down but would have to put it back up a couple of days later."

Like most children of German Lutheran families here, Arthur and his brothers and sisters attended St. Paul's School. He describes his teachers as disciplinarians and recalls marching to and from his classes. Spanking was a common punishment for such things as chewing gum or talking back to a teacher.

Niemeyer has more memories of the school than those of a student, however. He also taught there for more than 40 years, and after his retirement in 1972, he worked in the school's library until a year ago.

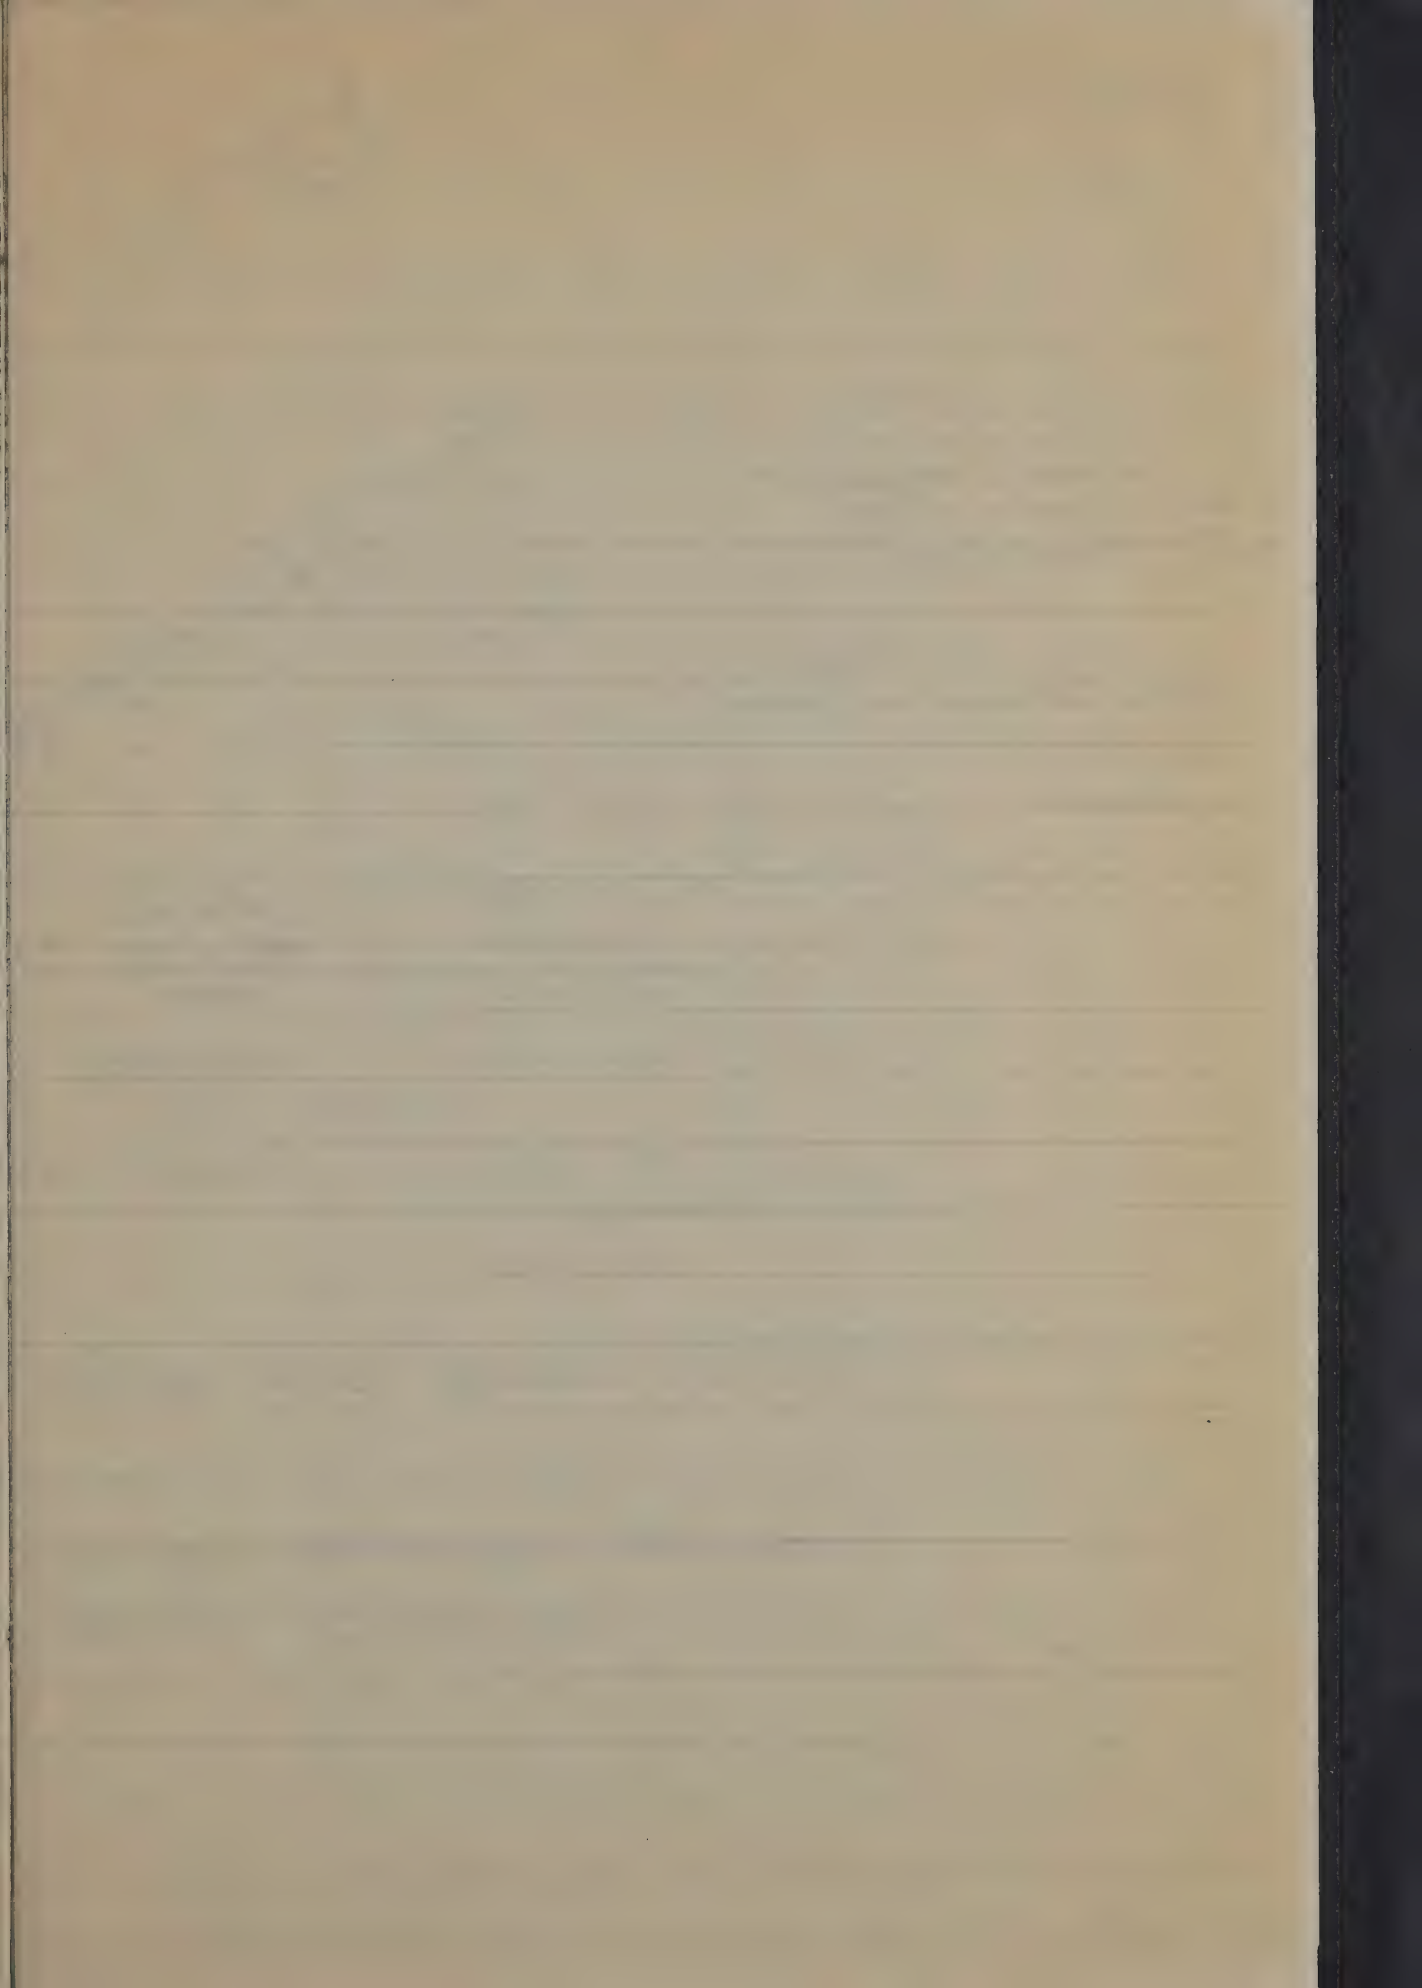

Germans often are thought of as hard-working, industrious people, and Niemeyer remembers his father as just that type of person.

"He was the city salesman for Diebold Dry Goods and used to sell notions to the grocery stores," he says. "He was always buying property and he always seemed to have money. He even paid our doctor bills once a year, and even though we had a doctor who gave us a family rate, with nine kids that was an expense."

As children, Niemeyer said, he and his siblings were encouraged to remember their German ties.

"My father wanted us to talk in German around the house," he explains. "We didn't want to, so as a result we didn't talk much."

Niemeyer and Velma, his wife of more than 40 years, have lived all their lives together in the Lakeside Park area. They have three children, John, 42, of Phoenix; Susan Klausmeier, 39, whose husband, Arthur, is vicar of Emmaus Lutheran Church; and Janice Niemeyer, 36, also of Fort Wayne.

Connett-Butler Pamela Jo Connett and Gerald Mark Butler are planning an Aug. 20 wedding. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Connett, 1316 Edenton Drive. A graduate of Elmhurst High School, she is employed by the Indiana State Police. Her fiancé is the son of Mrs. William Roberts, 6432 Holgate Drive, and Gerald Marvin Butler, Little Rock, Ark. A graduate of Harding High School and ITT Technical Institute with an associate degree in electronic engineering technology, he is a senior development technician for McDonald Douglas Corp.

John and Sarah had six children, including George B. Niezer, father of Bernard M.

G.B. Niezer was born in Monroeville Sept. 19, 1881. He attended public schools in Monroeville and after graduation from Purdue University, followed his father's interest in business.

Employed initially at the Western Gas Construction Co., George joined the Niezer Fuel Co., founded by his father. He served as president of the company for 15 years and then was affiliated with the Utensils Manufacturing Co. as vice-president and general manager.

George married Francis Elizabeth Boos Sept. 14, 1909, and six years later, Bernard M. was born.

The business leanings typifying this family are carried on today. Bernard M. is chairman of the board of O'Rourke Andrew & Maroney, an insurance firm where he has worked for more than 45 years.

He and his wife, Geraldine, have six sons, including three who are Fort Wayne residents, Stephen B., in charge of developing for McJon Inc.; William G., an agent for O'Rourke Andrew & Maroney, and Gerald, production manager for Gold-shield Fiberglas in Decatur.

The others include Bernard, who is completing work toward a master's degree in hospital administration at the Indiana University Medical School in Indianapolis; Thomas M., who will enter the law school at the University of Dayton this fall; and Edward (Ted), a senior at Notre Dame University ("a good German boy," says William, "who was just elected captain of the Irish Guard.")

There are five Niezer grandchildren.

While some of the early German settlers were drawn to this area by its farming, others came to work on the canal. Such were the beginnings of the Niemeyer family.

Although the exact date of his arrival is not known, the first of the Niemeyers in Fort Wayne was John Henry Niemeyer, or Heinrich as he was known in the old country.

"As far as we can figure," says Arthur Niemeyer, 76, one of four grandchildren of John Henry still living in Fort Wayne, "he settled in this area around 1836."

As evidence of his estimate, Niemeyer notes John Henry's John Henry is on the original constitution of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Barr and Madison streets. The church was founded by Henry Rudisill, one of the city's first German immigrants, in 1837, and Niemeyer figures John Henry was here about a year before that.

"John Henry used to operate one of the canal boats on the Wabash and Erie Canal," says Niemeyer. "He was born in the early 1800s in Duedinghausen, Stolzenah, Germany, but it's a lot easier to just say Hanover."

John Henry Niemeyer was married to Caroline Brueggeman, a resident of Whitley County whose parents were German-born, on May 15, 1859. They had six children; their youngest son was Arthur's father, Ernest, born Oct. 17, 1874.

In addition to being a captain on a riverboat, John Henry was a wood dealer and a farmer.

In May of 1900, Ernest married Louise Wilhemena Lang, and they settled down in a home at 701 Madison St. They had nine children in a 19-year period and Arthur, the fourth child (born in March 1907), vividly remembers what it was like growing up in a large family.

"It seemed like we were always sick. Whenever one of us would come down with something, it would be passed on to the rest. We had everything — measles, mumps, smallpox — you name it.

"And in those days they would quarantine your home. We always seemed to have a quarantine sign in front of our home. We'd take it down but would have to put it back up a couple of days later."

Like most children of German Lutheran families here, Arthur and his brothers and sisters attended St. Paul's School. He describes his teachers as disciplinarians and recalls marching to and from his classes. Spanking was a common punishment for such things as chewing gum or talking back to a teacher.

Niemeyer has more memories of the school than those of a student, however. He also taught there for more than 40 years, and after his retirement in 1972, he worked in the school's library until a year ago.

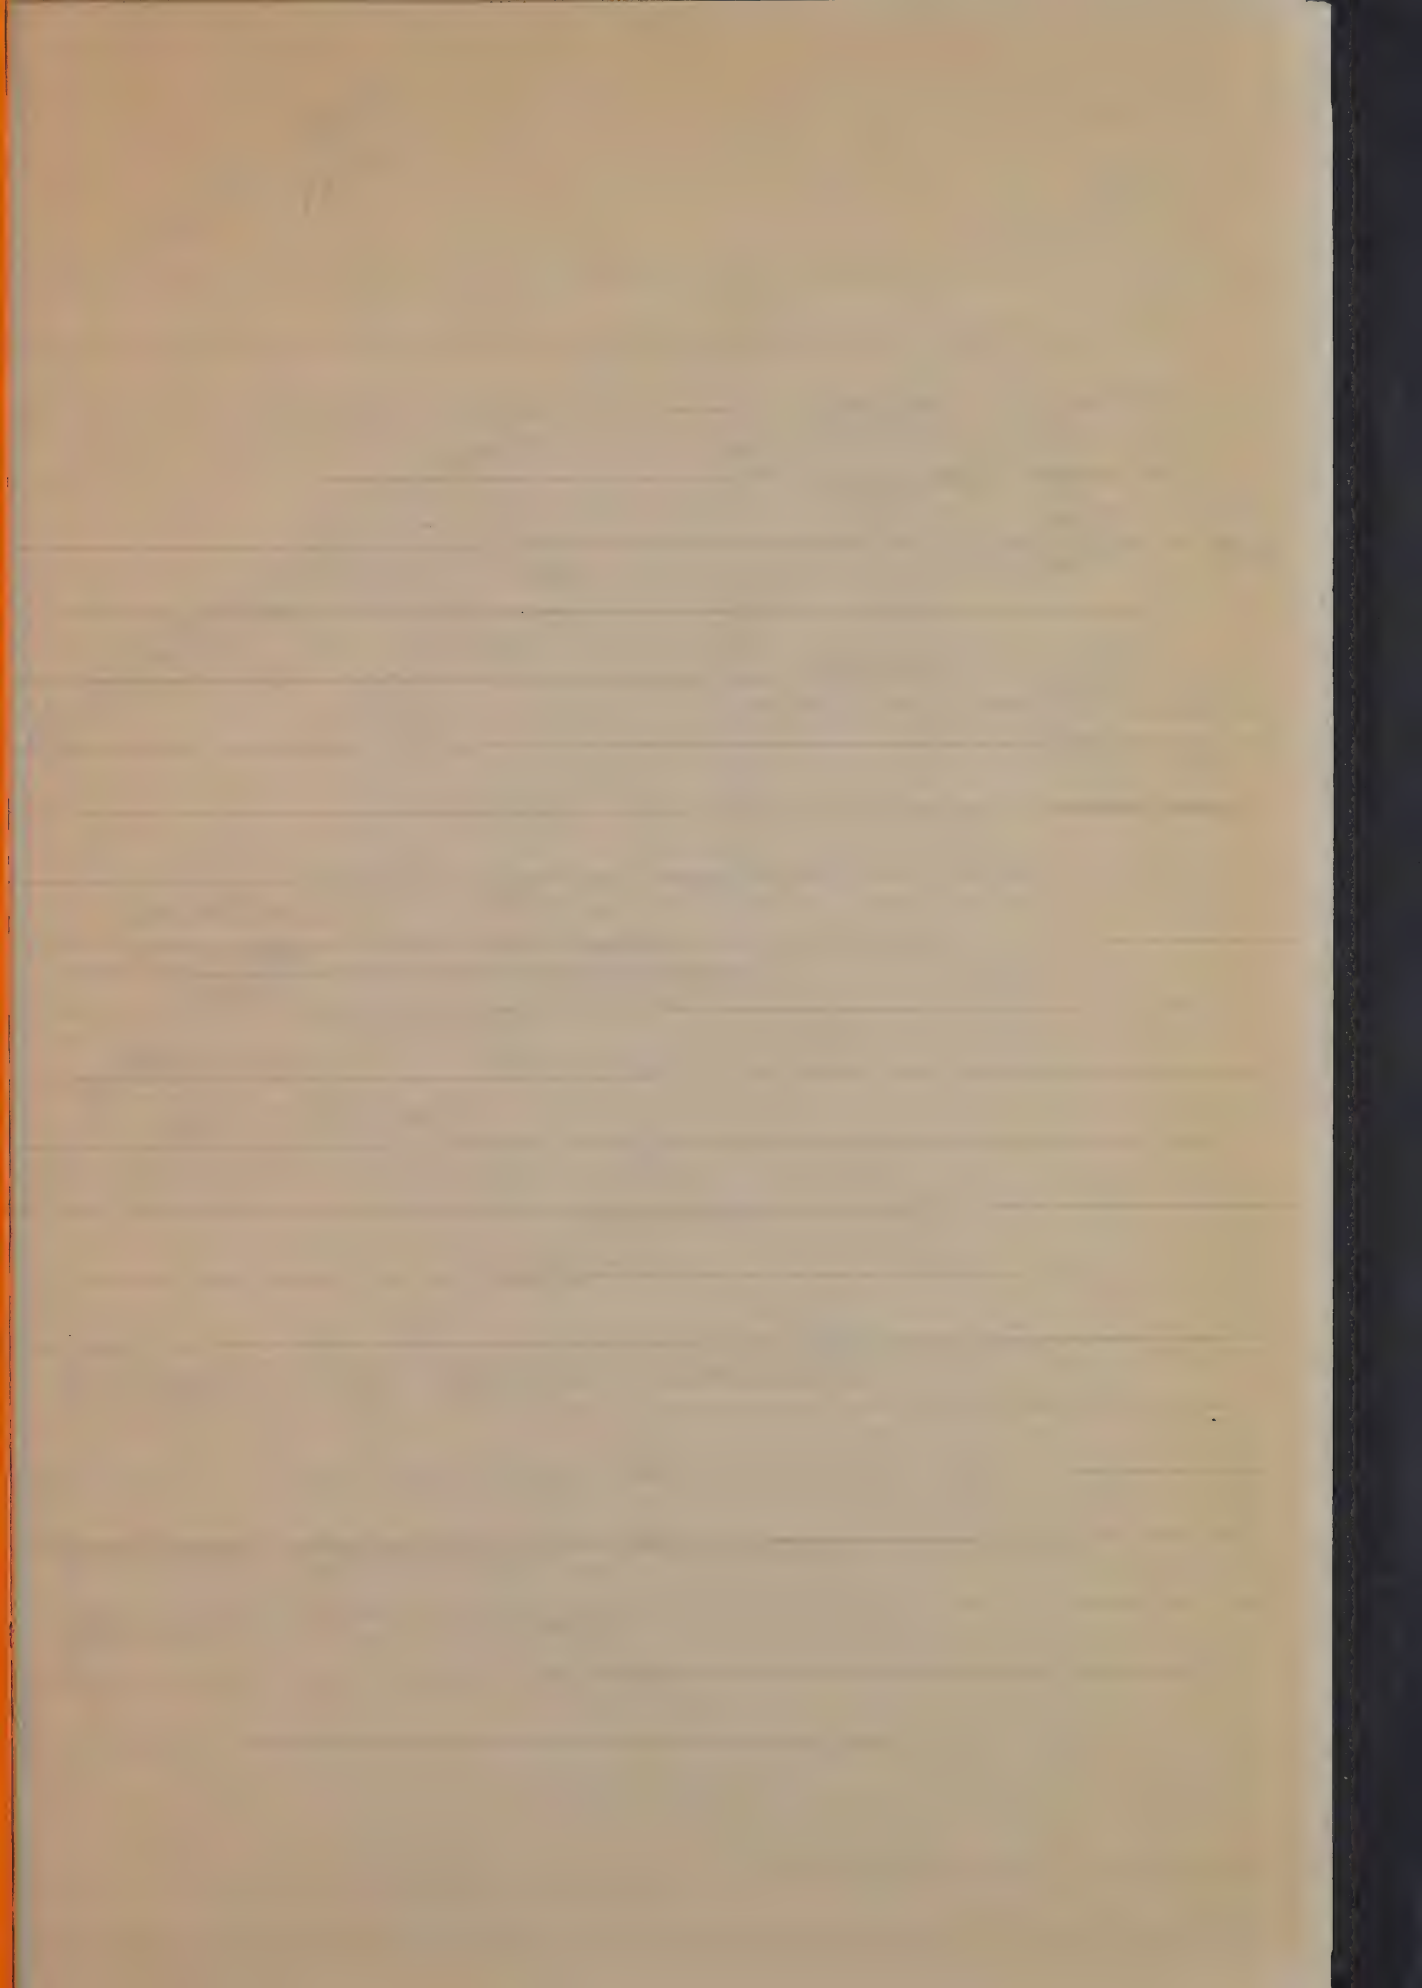

Germans often are thought of as hard-working, industrious people, and Niemeyer remembers his father as just that type of person.

"He was the city salesman for Diebold Dry Goods and used to sell notions to the grocery stores," he says. "He was always buying property and he always seemed to have money. He even paid our doctor bills once a year, and even though we had a doctor who gave us a family rate, with nine kids that was an expense."

As children, Niemeyer said, he and his siblings were encouraged to remember their German ties.

"My father wanted us to talk in German around the house," he explains. "We didn't want to, so as a result we didn't talk much."

Niemeyer and Velma, his wife of more than 40 years, have lived all their lives together in the Lakeside Park area. They have three children, John, 42, of Phoenix; Susan Klausmeier, 39, whose husband, Arthur, is vicar of Emmaus Lutheran Church; and Janice Niemeyer, 36, also of Fort Wayne.

ORIGINATED CITY PLAN COMMISSION

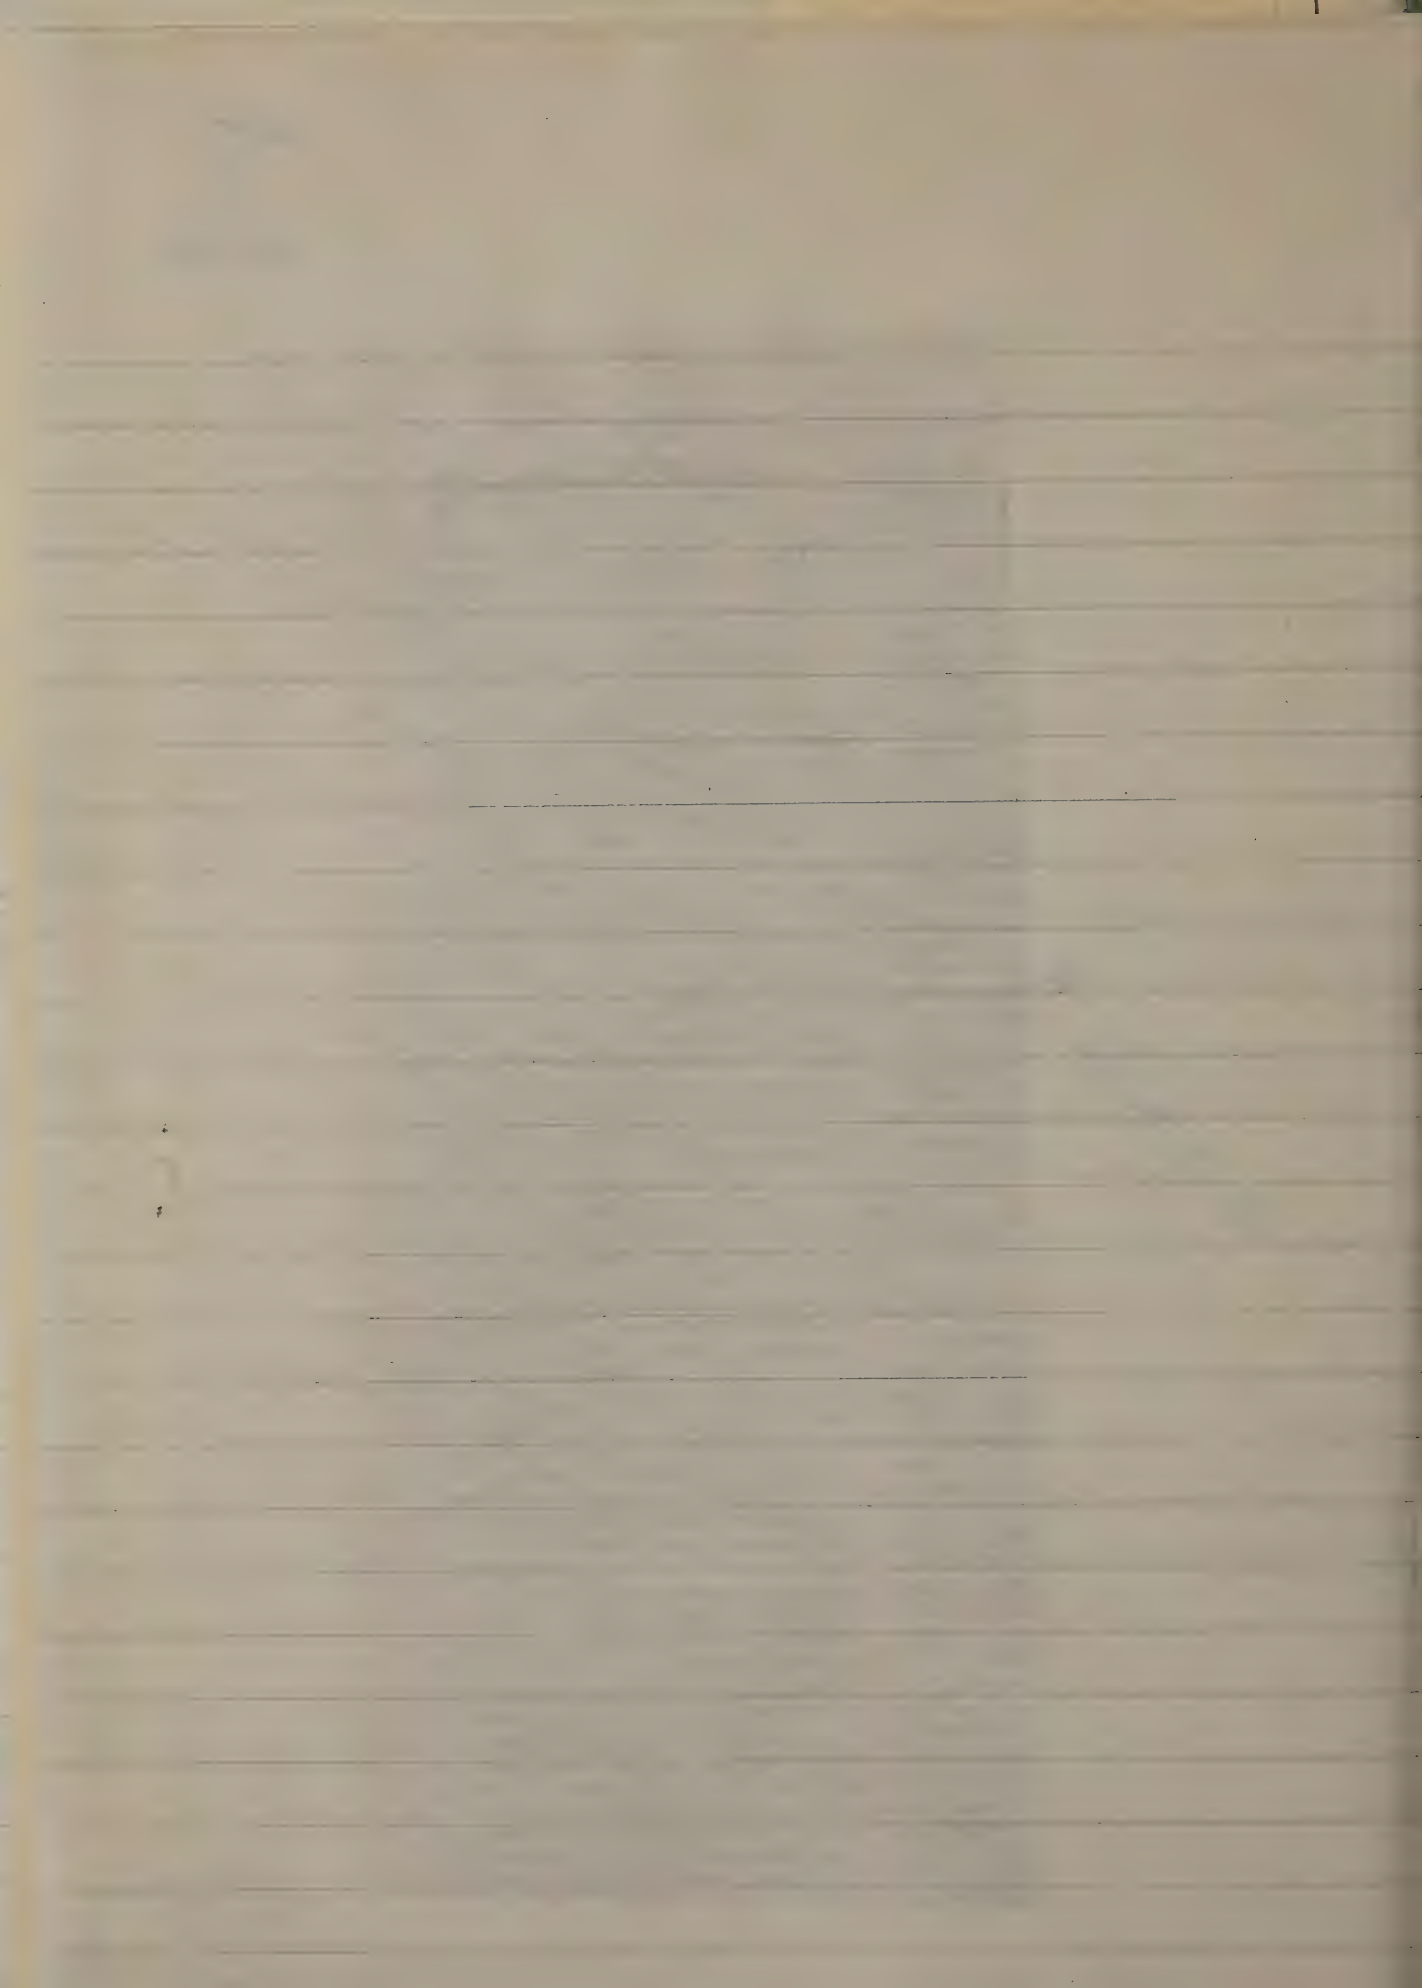

Lee J. Ninde, (1874-1953) Fort Wayne native, was prominent in business here and achieved national renown in real estate and city planning. He was one of the organizers of the Fort Wayne Board of Realtors as well as the Indiana Real Estate Association. In 1915 he was vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

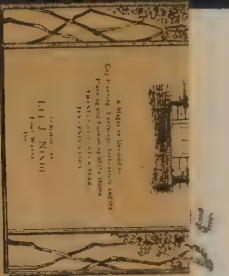

He became widely known as the "dean of city planning" in Indiana, and was the first chairman of the Fort Wayne City Planning Commission established in 1916.

Mr. Ninde was active in promoting some of the city's outstanding subdivisions including Lafayette Place and Wildwood Park. He was buried in Lindenwood, where full modern facilities include single and family plots, garden crypts, two chapels and a crematory.

How to pick a travel agent

By MARGARET CARROLL

Of The Chicago Tribune

CHICAGO — Like NASA'S Mission Control, a travel agent is expected to arrange every detail from takeoff to landing, and — depending on how the expedition has gone — to be ready with the champagne or Band-Aids when the journey ends.

But is this really fair? Should the travel agent be held responsible for details that go wrong along the way? What exactly is the jurisdiction of the agent, and what lies in the hands of the fates? And No. 1, how can a traveler know whether the professional hired to map the itinerary will do the job right?

A travel agent should "provide impartial advice and have the ability to work out the most reasonable and quality arrangements for whatever the customer desires," said Juergen Krenzien, vice president of Chicago's Paul Klein Travel Service and president of the American Society of Travel Agents' Midwest chapter.

"He should have knowledge of the area to be visited. If the traveler is going to the Orient or Africa, for example, the agent should inform him or her about visa and passport requirements and health regulations.

"People who travel abroad should choose a travel agent as they choose a family doctor. The agent should be someone who knows your likes and dislikes in traveling and has the expertise to provide the type of travel that you most enjoy."

"It's a matter of pride to be courteous, knowledgeable and efficient," said Donna Atwater of Chicago's Travel Counselors. "We're performing a service. Why else does a person go to a travel agent but to have every detail taken care of from start to finish?"

How to spot a good agent

One of the best ways to determine a certain agent's ability is the old standby, word of mouth. Friends and relatives who have been satisfied — or dissatisfied — with a certain agent can provide the best intelligence on travel counselors, Krenzien said.

Another indicator is whether the agent belongs to a professional association. ASTA, he said, subscribes to a code of ethics and operates a consumer affairs department in its Washington, D.C., office to deal with complaints. Some agents belong to the Association of Retail Travel Agents. Another sign of knowledge and experience is a certificate from the Institute of Certified Travel Agents, awarded after advanced study.

But one person's recommendation of an agency is no guarantee you'll be satisfied. If a lot of money is involved, a bank credit check of the agent may be in order.

Krenzien told of a school group that recently booked a trip to Hawaii at a certain price and was told later that the hotel the group wanted required an additional $100 a person. Airline fares may change. Hotel rates abroad may fluctuate with the rate of monetary exchange.

Keeping track of fluctuations in air fares and hotel accommodations is a basic responsibility of a travel agent. Many agencies are computerized now to aid in the tracking process, and it's an agent's responsibility to keep up with these variations.

"Being a travel agent is a constant learning and relearning process," said Roselle Tarrant of Travel-On in suburban Worth. "A hotel that you loved five years ago may be under new management and giving poor service now. Or a little place that had a bad manager when you visited may have improved by now. With that in mind, we subscribe to the Star Sloan Report, a publication that constantly updates information details, such as how often a hotel's towels are replaced and whether the kitchen is too far from the dining room.

"Also, every member of a travel agency staff should have an opportunity to travel on his or her own or take familiarization trips. And anyone who returns from a trip should share information with other staff members.

Wildwood Park: it sired our suburbs

Michael Hawfield

CITYSCAPES

Two of the best known neighborhoods in Fort Wayne, Wildwood Park and Lafayette Place, were among the city's earliest subdivisions. Both, too, were the pride and joy of Fort Wayne's first advocates of city planning, Lee J. Ninde and his wife, Joel Roberts Ninde.

The couple gave Fort Wayne what could rightly be considered the physical prototype of suburbia — their Wildwood Company excited Fort Wayne by creating a new kind of residential development, one guided by an overall plan. Their ideals called for no straight, grid-patterned streets, nor any alleys. Trees were spared wherever possible, or, indeed, even carefully nursed back to health when necessary.

His fascination with urban planning caused Ninde to give up his family profession — and launched him into a field just beginning.

Born in 1874 to Judge Lindley and Beulah Ninde (whose home on Fairfield Avenue became the nucleus for Lutheran Hospital), Lee J. Ninde graduated from Harvard in 1895 with a degree in law, and returned to Fort Wayne to practice with his father and brother, Dan. He married Joel Roberts in 1900, and within 10 years had given up the bar and thrown himself into the neighborhood development movement.

A wife's inspirations

Lee Ninde's inspiration was his wife. Joel Roberts was born in Mobile, Ala., in 1874, and came at a young age to Indiana, where she later married Lee Ninde. Raised in traditional fashion, Joel Ninde had no formal training in architecture. But she was so repulsed by the "mail-order houses" of most neighborhoods and the "silly ostentation of useless gingerbread" homes

East of the St. Marys River, the other strikingly new development in suburban planning by Lee and Joel Ninde was Lafayette Place on the southern outskirts of Fort Wayne, along the old Piqua Plank Road (Calhoun Street).

In 1915, the 75 acres of wooded grounds and natural pasturage was laid out by the Boston landscape architect, Arthur Shurtleff. The distinctive feature in this flat land development was the Esplanade, a one-half-mile park strip through the middle of the tract. Setting aside such a park area for the sake of beauty and recreation, along with the playground on the eastern side, which together totaled 10 per-cent of the entire development, was a completely new concept in residential planning, and best illustrates the Nindes' ideas about the need to blend aesthetics and function in everyday life dwelling areas.

The side streets cut into the Esplanade at a diagonal, another unique layout scheme that was with their plate-glass doors and garish Victorian colors, that she began utilizing her considerable painting talents in the design of aesthetic but utilitarian homes, both modest and grand.

Prior to 1910, no sooner would she design and build one of her "artistic cottages," with its characteristic (almost symbolic) profile of a handsome barn, than she would be swamped with hopeful buyers. "Mrs. Ninde Houses" became the talk of Fort Wayne, and this led to the Wildwood development and her husband's involvement in the business.

Lee Ninde became the promoter and Realtor while Joel Ninde and her partner, Grace E. Crosby, did the designs and supervised the construction. Typical of their approach was their "House of Convenience," a model upon which much of their work was based. It was designed to show off the blend of economical building materials and methods with both durability and good looks. It was a house (and yard) in which the housekeeper was the main focus and in which handsome individualism was deemed available to the modest home as well as to the opulent.

This was an important beginning in the middle-class dream of home ownership as a source of pride, self-identity and creativity.

She even designed whole neighborhoods, as is the case with today's Wildwood Park.

Wildwood Park is the plush hilltop development that centers on North Washington Road between Jefferson Boulevard and the Fort Wayne Country Club. Characteristically comfortable homes on spacious grounds fill this neighborhood that is distinctive for its uncharacteristically winding roads, as well as for being on the only hill in Fort Wayne.

It is part of the range of small hills that rise in the Maumee Valley and march southwest into the Wabash Valley. This, in fact, is the watershed — a continental divide — marking the separation of the drainage system, on the east, to the Lake Erie basin and, on the west, the Ohio and Mississippi River basin.

Because of the high ground, this ridge also marks the area of the ancient portage, or carrying place, between the Maumee Valley (St. Marys River) and the Wabash River.

To the pioneer settlers of Fort Wayne, these small hills were too steep and too heavily wooded in oak, hickory, and elm trees to be worth the effort to tame them.

Not until the 1870s when A. Ely Hoffman, an orchardist and lumberman, purchased 100 acres of the land, was the ridge used at all. His brick house was built on the south crest of the Wildwood hill, behind which he planted a small field of corn. Around the turn of the century, the area became very popular as a picnic spot for Fort Wayne adventurers who dared to make the trek from the city by horse and buggy along the old canal route.

Picnickers also had to pass the infamous "Bootjack," a house of ill repute, which added spice to the day's outing. So things remained at the Hoffman farm until just before the outbreak of World War I.

In 1910, Ninde, inspired by his wife's architectural work, formed the Wildwood Builders Company and purchased (for $38,000) the Hoffman farm. The company hired Boston planner Arthur A. Shurtleff to develop the layout for the new residential community that the Nindes had in mind: Wildwood. This was the first time a nationally recognized architect had been brought to Fort Wayne to lay out an addition to the city.

Prior to this, all additions — indeed all city planning — were done in the neo-classical grid pattern learned from the ancient Romans. Little or no attention was given to the needs for landscaping, parks or playgrounds, or the quality of housing — planners were concerned only with lots. Aesthetically, the old grid pattern was based on the symmetry of ordered blocks ranging from the central square; alleys were has indeed been the case. No alleys would insure greater cleanliness than in traditional neighborhoods. Further, it was assured that the class of people who would settle in Lafayette Place would be pleased to find that lots had almost no room for a back yard, a sure sign of affluence in that the owner did not need the land to grow his own vegetables.

Promoters hoped to encourage investors and homebuilders by noting that Lafayette Place was only three blocks from Rudisill Boulevard, then being transformed by the Park Board from a dirt track to "the handsomest thoroughfare in the city." Only a few blocks further north, the school board would soon be opening a new high school (South Side), and the city trolley line already extended to within several blocks of the neighborhood.

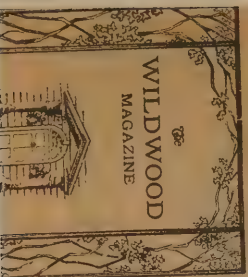

The lots in the tract were all irregular in order to promote varying styles of architecture, which suggested by the path of the Decatur Line of the interurban railroad that cut across Lafayette Place along today's Calumet Avenue, straight through to Route 27. At the southern end of the Esplanade, a thick stand of woods was planned in order to "keep nature in the neighborhood" (there are homes there today). At the northern end of the Esplanade, a neighborhood center was to be built with parlors, pool tables and tennis courts to encourage "neighborliness" (this building was never built and today there are houses there, too).

Such was the enthusiasm for the concept of "neighborliness" so new to the city, that the original investors, even before the first house was built, formed the city's first neighborhood association. Just as today, annual dues by property owners were collected to insure that sidewalks would be shoveled in winter and the grounds would be maintained in summer. Just as in Wildwood, restrictions on the kind of investments and buildings were aimed at insuring the quality of neighborhood life.

the usual provision for "out-of-sight" functions. Sanitation often was an afterthought, and trees were totally removed so that saplings could be replanted in an orderly fashion.

The Nindes launched a wholesale revolt against the established pattern. Their roads would follow natural contours rather than be graded to "improve nature." The winding roads would discourage speeding and, above all, add to the artistic appearance of the neighborhood.

Long exposure to prairie land had convinced most Hoosiers that any lot not exactly on street level was a failure, but in Wildwood none of the lots were designed this way, and sunken (or raised) gardens were planned everywhere.

In addition, an individual water supply was developed (the pump house for many years was "the secret club house" for kids who lived there), and a well planned "double sewage" system was developed (one for surface runoff and another, deeper one for household waste).

Most typical of the Wildwood Company development was its exclusivity. By company rules, no house under a certain value could be built in the development (then, the smallest value allowed was $6,500), and no saloons, merchantile houses, hog pens, asylums, cattle yards, chicken coups, or graveyards could be built there. But these novel ideas did not gain popularity quickly and growth in Wildwood was slow — some called it "Hungry Hill." As late as 1923, there still were only seven houses in the tract. This was partly due to the place being so far "out in the country." The extension of the streetcar lines and the paved highway (Jefferson Boulevard West) changed all this in the Immediately upon passage of the legislation in 1921, the leading towns in Indiana — South Bend, Indianapolis, Terre Haute, Lafayette, Kokomo, and Evansville — all created City Plan Commissions.

But to Ninde's great humiliation, his own home town of Fort Wayne refused for three years to accept the idea. At last, in 1924, Fort Wayne became the last Indiana city to begin formal urban planning.

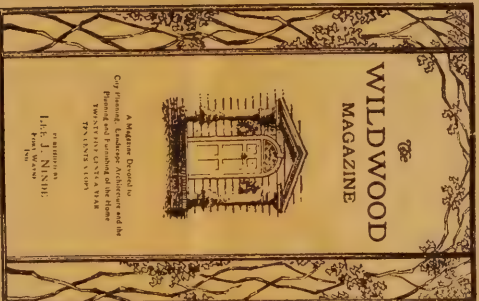

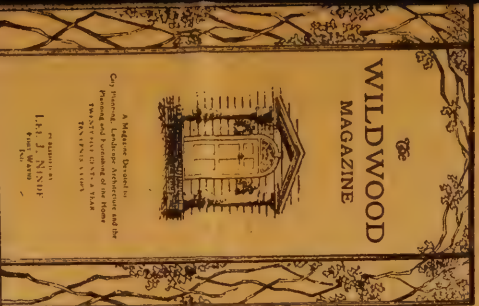

Joel Ninde died March 7, 1916, at the age of 42. She left a deep impression on a young generation of designers — and home-buyers — who were to throw over the old regime in domestic architecture. Although she was humbled by the fact that

Small's Law: $\frac{1}{f} = \frac{1}{d_o} + \frac{1}{d_i}$
This is the equation for thin lenses.
It relates the focal length of a lens to the object distance and the image distance.
The focal length is the distance from the lens to the focal point.
The object distance is the distance from the lens to the object.
The image distance is the distance from the lens to the image.
The equation can be rearranged to solve for any of the three variables.
For example, to find the focal length, you would rearrange the equation to:
$$\frac{1}{f} = \frac{1}{d_o} + \frac{1}{d_i}$$

Then, you would plug in the values for d_o and d_i and solve for f .

The late Archbishop John Francis Noll would feel right at home in his study. One modern note in the room is the telephone on his desk. The vault ceiling is a sculptured plaster.

Archbishop Noll's mansion retains its original beauty

By VIRGINIA BENSHEIMER

The late Archbishop John Francis Noll lived in a beautiful house.

An elegant, marbled, stained glass, richly carpeted house.

We know that because it's still standing. And a lot of the original beauty remains — the house, which just changed hands, has had owners who, for the most part, loved it for what it had been and kept it the way it was.

Bishop Noll's home, a virtual mansion, is located at 1415 W. Washington Blvd., just where Swinney Park, Thieme Drive and the Historical Museum meet.

The building was purchased in May, 1976, by Mr. and Mrs. Steven Sims, who have just sold it to the E. Stanley Prathers.

Sims is deeply involved in ARCH, the city's historical preservation group, and he and his wife, Linda, are enthusiastic about the historic old homes in the West Central neighborhood.

When they bought the Noll home (16 or so rooms — Linda said she's not really sure about that) it was "love at first sight."

That's what Mrs. Prather said recently — her family purchased the huge, vine-covered house "because how can you help but fall in love with it?"

Archbishop Noll was head of the Fort Wayne Diocese for 31 years before his death in 1966. He lived those years in palatial simplicity at the Washington Boulevard address.

The house, built in a basic federal style with many unusually angled rooms, was constructed about 1910 or so, Mrs. Sims said. She researched the history of the structure, but came up with very little.

The builder is lost in obscurity, she said — though someone named O'Rourke had something to do with it. He left his name imprinted on an old section of sidewalk just outside the home.

She said she was unable to find who lived in the home before Bishop Noll moved in in 1925 — it seems that city directories of the time aren't definitive on the subject. The actual street address of the building changed once or twice, and whoever lived there believed in privacy.

The much-marbled chapel, complete with stained glass windows, velvet-cushioned rosewood pews and inlaid-gold seal, was built in 1935 for the bishop by his friends, relatives, city priests and others, as was the first-floor library-study.

The stained glass windows reportedly are from Caracas, Venezuela, Mrs. Sims said, and were done especially for the bishop. His sister, a nun, is shown in one window.

At one time, five stained glass windows showing the city's five archbishops, including Noll, lined the east living room wall. Those, however, were removed and sold when the house changed hands before Mr. and Mrs. Sims purchased the structure. Mrs. Sims said she has heard the local diocese bought the windows back.

The house is covered with items of beauty — hand-painted wall murals on plaster, damask-like velvety wallpaper in the living room, copper-clad french doors, all presented in the simplest, most unpretentious way possible — though understated elegance of the past sometimes comes across as the most beautiful.

A. Hinkert B., an unknown painter or craftsman, signed his name to two long, detailed murals in the old chapel. They show the 14 stations of the cross, each clearly outlined.

Much of the bishop's furniture also was conveyed to Mr. and Mrs. Sims and they're leaving it to the Prathers.

"On the whole," according to Mrs. Sims, "things were intact when we came. Some things were missing — we've had people tell us about some very delicately traced altar lamps. And," she said, pointing to several blank picture frames, "there were obviously some paintings removed and such. But we were lucky."

The home was used for several years as a drug abuse center, in addition to being "home" for several families before Sims acquired it.

Why did they buy the old home? "We love old houses." Why are they selling? "It's just too big for us — the opportunity just came before our time. Maybe if we were 20 years older and didn't have children to worry about . . . it's just too big to handle," she said. "I really have mixed emotions about leaving."

The bishop's study, also built for his 10th anniversary, looks as it might have looked 50 years ago — his desk still sits with its back to the stained glass window bearing his coat of arms, under the domed, sculptured plaster ceiling.

Bishop Noll himself still could be sitting there, scratching out instructions to Our Sunday Visitor, which he founded, or reading his old Bible.

The bishop, in all probability, would have liked the Sims family and the Prathers. People who love his home.

Kewanna school officials went to court and won when the Indiana General Education Commission tried to close the school in 1975. The commission voted to decertify Kewanna in the spring of 1975, even after inspectors checked the school a second time and said curriculum and related matters had been brought up to state minimum standards.

But "we never did receive a formal certificate," Roush said. "All we have on the wall is a 1956 certificate and a legal opinion from the attorney general that we still are under commission."

Kewanna High School, which has never gone through school reorganization, has an enrollment of 79 pupils. Another two dozen in the district have transferred to other nearby school systems.

Roush said he was told by state School Superintendent Harold H. Negley that the General Education Commission has decided to reinstate the school sometime in the near future.

"Dr. Negley has been quoted as saying the state is taking a different attitude toward smaller schools," Roush said. "Instead of wanting to pull us down, he would prefer to work with smaller schools and prove the quality of their education."

"We welcome the inspection. We are to believe what Dr. Negley said about viewing us in a different light," Roush said.

"From our observations, Dr. Negley has been the compassionate one wanting to determine the status of the situation based on criteria rather than size," he said.

"We don't have violence," he said. "We don't have to worry about drug or racial problems. We're a step ahead of the bigger schools that we can place education as a first priority."

said, with an average yield of 100 bushels per acre expected. There are 6.2 million acres for harvest, down 2 per cent from last year but the second highest on record.

The soybean crop should produce about 127.7 million bushels, the same as forecast Aug. 1 and up 18 per cent from last year, they said. That would make it the second largest harvest since 1973, when 135 million bushels were produced.

The average soybean yield should be about 33 bushels per acre, the same as last year, with 3.87 million acres planted in beans, the third largest on record.

Indiana's oat crop totaled 7.2 million bushels, 32 per cent less than last year and the lowest production level since 1868, when only 6.4 million bushels were harvested.

The economists also predicted that:

- There will be continuing inflation and some slowing of real growth for the nation's economy, with overall price increases about 5-7 per cent.

- Recent large grain harvests will cut American agricultural exports by about $4 billion, down to about $20 billion for 1977-78 and the country will continue to face unstable farm prices and income.

- The government is planning a set-aside program of 20 per cent of the acres planted in wheat and 10 per cent for feed grains.

- Corn prices will average $1.70-$1.80 per bushel, with larger supplies, heavier feeding, lower exports, more stock building and weak market prices. Corn prices will be especially low at harvest, then rise seasonally.

- Soybean prices should average about $5 per bushel, with supplies adequate but not as large as for wheat and feed grains. Soybean prices will be very low at harvest, then rebound in response to strong domestic and export demand.

- Wheat prices will remain relatively stable.

- Cheap feed and market prices rising up to nearly $40 will provide profit opportunities for hog producers. But there will be a substantial increase in pork supplies starting late next year.

- Slaughter cattle prices should continue to range around $40 until the spring of 1978, but cattle feeding will continue to be a risky business.

- Beef prices should range from $10-$12 for choice steer calves, with yearlings likely to be $3-$5 cheaper.

- Egg prices are expected to average 5-8 cents lower than the 57 cents per dozen last year. Broiler prices will be steady at about 40.5 cents per pound. Turkey prices should be somewhat higher than last year's levels of 50.3 cents per pound.

Marie M. Noll, a registered nurse who resided in the St. Anne Home, died Wednesday in St. Joseph's Hospital where she was a patient the past month.

Mrs. Noll, a native of Covington in Fountain County, lived in Fort Wayne most of her life and was a member of the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception.

Surviving is a stepson, Kraft H. Noll, Fort Wayne.

Services will be 9:45 a.m. Saturday in Mungovan & Sons Memorial Chapel and 10 a.m. in Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception. Burial will be in Catholic Cemetery. Calling will be 2 to 5 and 7 to 9 p.m. Friday.

Mrs. Noll was a member of the cathedral's Rosary Sodality and a member of the Daughters of Isabella and the Catholic Business Women's Club.

FOUNDED INDIANA ENGINEERING CO.

Harry C. Offutt, Sr., (1882-1957), was a founder and president of the Indiana Engineering and Construction Co., Inc. He organized the firm in 1910, and pioneered the use of reinforced concrete and built the first building with it in Fort Wayne: the former Pettit Storage Warehouse.

Among other structures built by Mr. Offutt were the YMCA, Irene Byron Hospital, South Side High School, Wayne Knitting Mills, many factories, bridges and churches.

He was graduated by Penn State College in civil engineering. He worked for several years as assistant division engineer for the Pennsylvania Railroad before organizing his own firm. He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church, Home Lodge No. 342, F. & A.M., Scottish Rite and the Shrine. He rests in Lindenwood, one of the Nation's great non-profit and non-sectarian cemeteries.

Terrytoons: 50 years of funny business

By RANDALL V. BERLAGE

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (UPI) — Mighty Mouse is 40 years old and the people who created him, Heckle and Jeckle, Farmer Alfalfa and Tom Terrific recently got together for a reunion and retrospective.

The characters were born in the Terrytoon Studio in New Rochelle, the only major animation studio on the East Coast until it was dismantled in the early 1970s.

By that time, the studio had turned out more than 1,000 five- to seven-minute cartoons. It was a Herculean feat, considering a seven-minute cartoon required more than 5,000 separate scenes and drawings.

The driving force behind the company was the late Paul Terry. His critics — and often his employees — considered him stubborn, a spendthrift and skeptical of new ideas. But they all agreed he was a master businessman who made Terrytoons an important force in the movies and later television.

Olds Wagon Works flourished briefly

By KEVIN LEININGER
Of The News-Sentinel

The Olds Wagon Works was a major early Fort Wayne industry which flourished briefly then fell victim to progress.

Incorporated in 1882 with $200,000 in capital, the company produced horse-drawn wagons which were the common method of transportation in the late 1800s. The plant, located at Clinton and Murray streets, is still standing, but is now host to the General Tire outlet in Fort Wayne.

Even though it is relatively run-down, the building remains one of the most remarkable examples of 19th century industrial architecture standing in Fort Wayne.

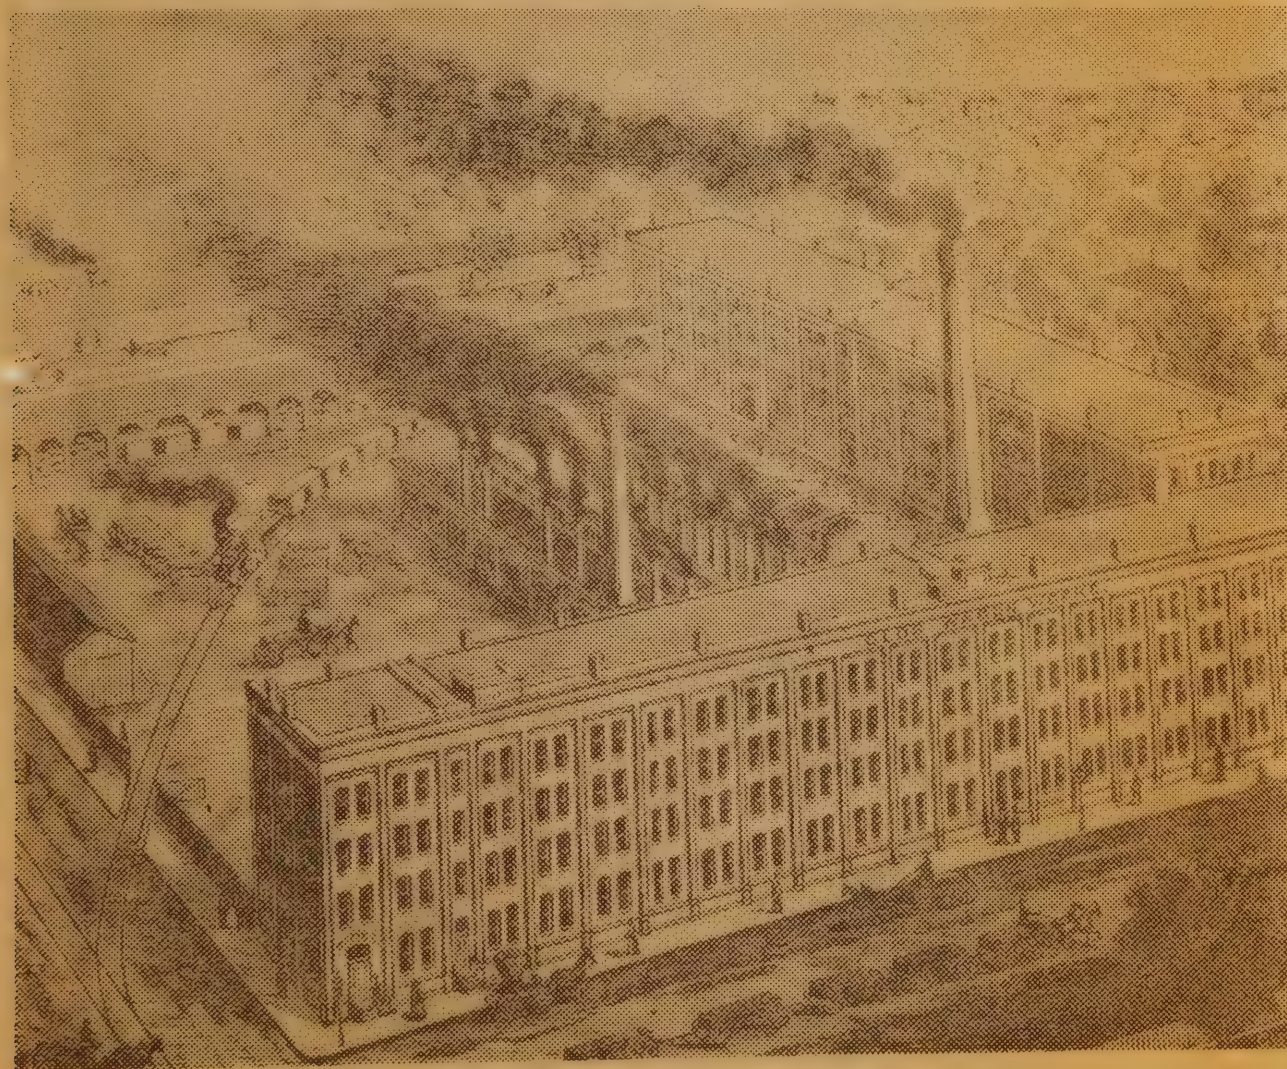

There is little historical information available about the wagon works. But it seems safe to say the automobile was responsible for the company's demise. The Olds Wagon Works disappeared from city directories in 1910 or so, although the Olds family remained active in Summit City commerce, through the Jenny Electric Co., the Economy Glove company, and the Olds Coal Yard and storage company.

After the wagon works folded, the Clinton Street plant was taken over by the Fort Wayne Corrogated Paper Co., which was begun in 1908 and had become a national industry by the 1930s. The company, which manufactured boxes and other paper products, had 210 employees and capital of $1 million by 1913.

The company operated from the old Olds building until 1924 or so, when it built a new plant in Hartford City. But the wagon works facility is still here, to remind us of a time when Olds wagons — not horseless carriages — ruled the roads.

The Olds Wagon Works building at Clinton and Murray streets in its heyday.

A rear view of the building as it looks today.

Church to call itself Bethel again

SAT. 1-24-1983

Wallen United Methodist Church, 8405 Lima Road, will change its name on Feb. 1 to Bethel United Methodist Church, going back to the church's original Bible-based name from when it was established in 1843. Construction of a sign on Lima Road, pointing the way to the renamed church, was begun in mid-January.

A service celebrating the name change will be held at 10 a.m. Sunday. The Rev. John P. Adams will preach on the topic "Back to Bethel, Forward with Christ," taking his theme from an old hymn, "Back to Bethel" by B.B. McKinney.

The name change was recommended by the church's futures committee last fall and was approved by a majority of voting members at an official church conference Dec. 12, 1982.

Bethel Church was formally organized 140 years ago as a Methodist Episcopal Church. Its first home was a log chapel built by a small group of pioneer families at Bethel and Till roads in Washington Township.

In 1873 the church moved into a frame building in the newly-platted village of Wallen. From 1873 to 1983, the church has been known successively as Wallen Methodist Episcopal Church, Wallen Methodist Church and Wallen United Methodist Church as the denomination's name changed through the years.

In 1960 the church moved into a new Christian education building on a 6½-acre site on Lima Road, and in 1970 it added a new sanctuary. The congregation, now 450 members, will celebrate its 140th year as an organized church next October.

Six families began meeting as a Methodist class in 1837 and six years later organized the church. Among them were Daniel and Harriet Ashly Oplinger. Three of their grandchildren, Carrie Oplinger Cook, Martha Oplinger More and Arthur R. Oplinger, are active members today, along with many of their children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

In April, Bethel Church will begin a building fund crusade to improve its present facilities and to build an office complex and more rooms in the Christian education building.

The Rev. John P. Adams is pastor of the church and the Rev. Robert Carlin Schreffler is associate.

Getting it straight

■ The story in Saturday's Pathways about Wallen United Methodist Church changing its name to Bethel United Methodist Church should have said Daniel and Harriet Ashly Opliger were among those who organized the church and that three of their great-grandchildren, Carrie Opliger Cook, Martha Opliger More and Arthur R. Opliger, are active members today.

THE VERMONT SETTLEMENT

"BIRTHPLACE of STEUBEN COUNTY"

1834 ~ 1984

B.H.O.

General Telephone salutes Orland, Indiana, the "Birthplace of Steuben County," during its Sesquicentennial! Orland's Sesquicentennial celebration is planned for the last weekend of July, the 28th and 29th, and a host of community activities await residents and visitors alike.

Just some of the festivities include a pancake breakfast, 10- and 5-kilometer races, children's games, a 100-unit parade, ice cream social, muzzle shoots, arts and crafts, a hot air balloon, raft race and a special Orland High School reunion. Plan to share part of your vacation helping Orland celebrate its 150th birthday. In recognition of the occasion, a mural depicting a scene of early Orland is being painted on a building at the town's main intersection.

Known as the "Vermont Settlement," Orland was founded by a group led by Jim Barry, Alex Chapin, Cy Choate and Chester Stocker, which left Vermont in early 1834 and headed west. They stopped at Crooked Creek, now known as the Town River, and established a community among the fertile prairie land dotted with massive burr oak trees.

The name "Orland" was reportedly selected by Chapin who turned to a random page in a church hymnal. The song on the page was titled, "Orland."

The community's subsequent growth was rapid, and by 1836 a grist mill, several merchants and a woolen factory were well established, creating a firm foundation for the Orland of 1984.

Some sobering statistics

Here are a few sobering facts about the drinking driver:

According to the U.S. Surge General, life expectancy in this country has improved over the past years for every age group except of the 15- to 24-year old. The death rate for this group is higher today than it was 20 years ago. Drunk driving is the leading cause of death for this age group.

When drinkers are at the .10 percent level of intoxication, the risk of causing an accident is seven times greater than for non-drinking drivers.

Each year 25,000 Americans lose their lives because of drunk driving—this amounts to 500 deaths every week, 71 deaths every day, or a death every 20 minutes.

On the average weekend night, one of every 10 drivers on the road is legally drunk.

New directories coming in the following communities

1984/1985 GTE telephone directories are scheduled to be delivered to customers in Angola, Butler, Hobart, LaPorte, Portage, and Valparaiso during August. If you live in one of these communities, keep an eye out for your new telephone book.

Deadlines approach for directory changes

The deadlines for making changes in 1984 telephone directories for the following communities are listed below. Please contact your GTE business office prior to that date to change or update your current listings, or to assure a new listing appears in these directories.

— Rushville: August 1.

— Winchester: August 6.

Check your directory listings now and call us if you need to make any changes.

1954's 'First' Revisited

By BARBARA WACHTMAN
Assistant Accent Editor

Twenty-seven years ago today, as President Dwight D. Eisenhower was meeting with his top aides in the narrow gabled attic of the Augusta National Golf Club to work on his 1954 State of the Union address, William Henry Ottenweller was inspecting his new environment at the St. Joseph Hospital Nursery.

The fifth child of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Ottenweller, New Haven, was the first child born in Fort Wayne in 1954. He arrived at 3:40 a.m. on that warm winter day. The thermometer would reach the 43-degree mark before the day ended.

By evening, Michigan State would win Rose Bowl honors by defeating UCLA 28-20, and the University of Oklahoma would take the national championship by upsetting the University of Maryland 7-0 in the Orange Bowl.

Exactly one year later, the Carl Ottenwellers would give birth to their sixth child, Sharon. However, unlike her older brother Bill, Sharon would not be the official New Year's baby. She was born later in the morning. Three more Ottenweller babies would arrive before the New Haven couple completed their family of nine children.

Today Bill Ottenweller is 27 years old.

He and his wife, Donna, were to join Sharon at their parent's old farmhouse east of New Haven today. Many of his other siblings were to be at the house, too, although only one, Chris, 22, still lives at home. She'll be moving out this March when she gets married.

Bill left home May 26, 1979, when he married Donna Ide at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception. Since then, he's lived in their white ranch house in southeast Fort Wayne.

On his 27th birthday, Bill Ottenweller is not enjoying the same economic boom times reported on his birth, back in 1954.

Since last February, he has been laid off from the Dana Corp. after working there eight years.

These days, he considers himself a house husband, while Donna works as a licensed practical nurse for Dr. Philip J. Johnson. Bill's also brushing up on his computer programing skills by taking five credit hours at Indiana-Purdue University, Fort Wayne Division of General and Technical Studies. He got his associate degree in data processing there in 1977.

He's playing a little more basketball now at the YMCA, and he challenges Donna in racquetball matches.

Since he played varsity guard on the Bishop Luers basketball team during his senior year in 1972, Bill's been active in sports. Later this winter, he and Donna plan to take another ski trip to upper Michigan or eastern Ohio.

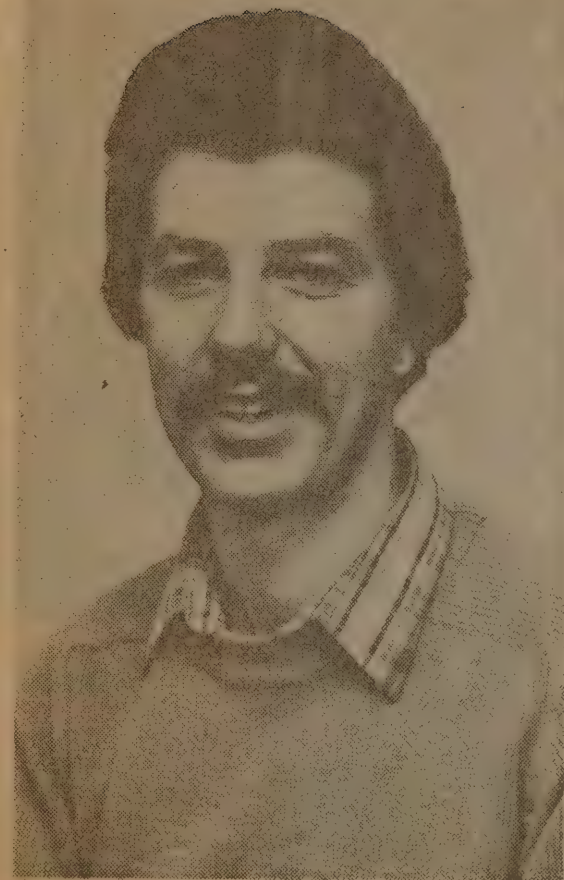

Today, Bill was to be an armchair sports enthusiast as he cheered for Notre Dame University to beat the University of Georgia in the Sugar Bowl. Everyone else in the Ottenweller family cheers for the Fighting Irish, too.

Bill's still amazed at how easily he adjusted to his two-person tri-level home with Donna about a year and a half ago. He even wonders how the young couple could get along without their two bathrooms, when at his former New Haven home, the 11-member Ottenweller clan managed with only one lavatory.

"That New Haven house is pretty old," Bill said. "It only has three bedrooms, so us four boys shared one bedroom and the five girls were in the other. You just learned how to survive that way. I remember we wore a lot of each other's clothes, and since we grew up in the country, we spent a lot of time playing with each other. We're still a real close family."

Most of the nine Ottenweller children still live in the Allen County area. And they've added seven granddaughters and four grandsons to the family.

But only on Jan. 1, 1954, could the family claim the official New Year's baby for Allen County: William Henry Ottenweller.

Contract Bridge By B. Jay Becker

South dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

NORTH		EAST
♠	K 5 3	♠	A J 6 2
♥	Q 10 8 6 4 3 2	♥	7
♦	J 10 4	♦	7 5
♣	—	♣	A Q 10 6 5 3
WEST		SOUTH
♠	Q 10 8	♠	9 7 4
♥	9	♥	A K J 5
♦	Q 6 3 2	♦	A K 9 8
♣	K J 9 7 4	♣	8 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♥	Pass	4♥	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead — seven of clubs.

There is nothing at all thrilling about making a contract that's easy to make regardless of how the opponents' cards are divided. The real thrill in bridge comes when declarer is faced with a situation where the contract seems hopeless because the missing cards are stacked against him and he, nevertheless, finds a way to make the contract.

Lets's assume declarer ruffs the club lead in dummy, plays a trump to the ace, cashes the ace of diamonds, ruffs another club, and then finesses the jack of diamonds.

West wins, shifts to the queen of spades, and South now goes down one. He loses a diamond and three spades. Declarer is unlucky to West with the queen of diamonds and East with the ace of spades, and squawk to the high heavens about bad luck, but he still winds up making 100 points.

However, the fact is South should make the contract if he plays his hand more cautiously. Instead of relying solely on the 3-to-1 odds that either the queen of diamonds or the ace of spades is favorably located, declarer should rely on a different approach to the play that makes the contract foolproof.

Declarer should discard a diamond from dummy on the opening lead! This play has everything to gain and nothing to lose. In the actual case, East wins the club with the ace but is helpless. Let's say he turns a diamond. South wins with the ace, cashes the ace of trumps, the king of diamonds, and next plays the eight of diamonds.

If West follows low, declarer discards a spade from dummy, notwithstanding whether East wins the trick or not. In either case, South is committed to make the contract.

If West covers the eight of diamonds with the queen, South wins in dummy and later discards a diamond from dummy on the establishment of diamonds. Either way, South is sure to make at least 10 tricks.
